

Signonella County Fair a Success!

Story courtesy of MWR Marketing

For two days, Morale, Welfare and Recreation's (MWR) Signonella County Fair provided a magical atmosphere shared and enjoyed by everyone in the community.

This year's annual event included a two-day line-up of local music provided by WOT, PreLuna, Flow to the Moon, and Appaloosa Victor.

Leading up to the entertainment were official MWR contests: Cow Milking, Gum Hunt, Trike-tor Pull, Frozen T-shirt, Seed-Spitting, and Nascar PitStop. For the first time, MWR opened the contests to all participants/visitors of County Fair.

"I truly feel the local nationals that attended got a real feel for what an 'American' County Fair is all about," said Tara Rather, Flight Line Fitness Center coordinator. "It's nice to be able to share some of our culture with them, since they have been so gracious in sharing theirs with us."

The festival this year was a tremendous success with new vendors, new rides, new contests, new Fun Zone, and having an open base event allowed commands and non-profit organizations to raise funds for their

"MWR would like to thank NAVFAC, Security and all other contributing units for all their support of this community celebration," said Mr. Bray, MWR director.

The next event will be MWR's Freedom Fest on Saturday, July 3, followed by Autumn Fest, Friday, October 15 to Saturday, October 16. For more information on community festivals and events call the Community Activities Office at 624-4941.

Navy Attends New Motta Medieval Museum Ribbon Cutting Ceremony

By Alberto Lunetta
The Signature Staff

The town of Motta recently unveiled the first floor of a new medieval castle museum in a ribbon-cutting ceremony. Dr. Angelo Giuffrida, the Motta mayor, decided to share this important occasion with the US Navy. "We'd like to invite our American friends to visit our beautiful castle and its new museum," Giuffrida said.

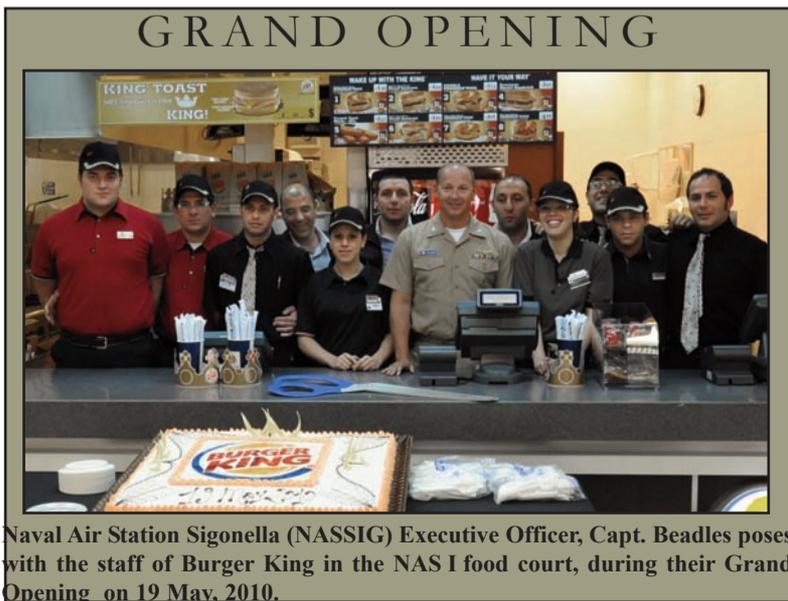

Signonella command representatives Cmdr. Andy Wegman and Lt. Cmdr. Preston Briggs and their wives, as well as local government and Italian military officials attended the event that was presided over by Hon. Lino Leanza, Sicily's Regional Deputy Governor. During the ceremony, Leanza emphasized the importance of Sicily's cultural heritage which is impressive in numbers but not as valued as it should be. "Sicily has 320 castles but not all of them are generally available to tourists. Just like the mayor of Motta has done, we need to work on promoting their enjoyment to benefit both Sicilians and tourists," Leanza said.

"I really enjoyed attending the Motta

Castle Museum Ribbon Cutting. It event was very well done. It was particularly nice meeting the Mayor of Motta and the Sicily's Regional Deputy Governor. I hope all Americans in Signonella, but especially those that live in Motta, visit the new museum, the video presentation and all of the displays are awesome," Kari Wegman said.

"It was a pleasure to be a part of the opening ceremony for the castle museum. What an incredible view of the valley from the castle windows up at the top! For almost three years my wife and I have wanted and attempted to get into the castle, but never with success. From NAS 1 we are all accustomed to seeing the castle on the hill, but not many of us knew that the tower was merely the center of a large and busy compound, surrounded by a fortress wall. It's all gone now, except for the tower. To consider all the battles, occupants, and history of the 1000-year old building is wild!" Briggs said.

If you would like to visit the museum or would like more information, please contact the Motta Pro Loco Tourist Office at 095-308161.

DIRECT LINE NASSIG COMMAND MASTER CHIEF LELAND MOORE

It's that time again. The weather is warm, the gnats are here, the barbecues and get-togethers are starting to occur more often and the sounds of vehicles flying past are all signals that summer is almost here.

With summer comes the increased use of motorcycles and all the risks associated with them. Motorcycle safety, you hear it over and over again, use ORM, PPE, watch your speed. But we are going to talk about it again because through out the services too many of our service members have been seriously injured or have died in private motor vehicle and motorcycle mishaps.

To quote Secretary of the Navy B.J. Penn: When average Americans think about the dangers that go into waging war they think of threats in lands far, far away. But when a year goes by and we lose more sailors and marines on motorcycles, than in support of the war, we are in many ways referring to a battle being fought at home in our own backyard – and our Marine Corps last year lost more people on motorcycles than we did in combat.

Recent trends indicate an increase in recklessness and noncompliance with traffic laws among younger riders, especially sport-bike riders.

To combat this trend, leadership at every level must ensure our sailors understand just how much rides on the decisions they make and the risks they assume while riding.

Leadership, I encourage you to be more involved with motorcycle riders within your commands. Ensure your newly arrived riders complete the mandatory Sigonella motorcycle course even if they have recently attended a Motorcycle Safety Foundation course elsewhere. Also make sure all your riders complete a refresher course once a year.

Assign a senior enlisted motorcycle rider as a mentor to new riders, develop peer groups and other positive environments and encourage all riders to get involved in some of the local groups that ride together. We have a wide range of clubs here, take advantage of them.

Riders, when you're out on the roads follow the law, watch your speed; keep an eye out for those vehicles that are not looking for you. When you're riding wear the proper equipment. Here in Sigonella it is mandatory for all riders to have a DOT approved helmet, a bright reflective outer garment, and sturdy footwear and gloves. Motorcycle ownership is a significant responsibility that requires you to have the proper licensing, insurance, registration and training before riding.

That said motorcycles are an eco-nomical, sensible, and fun form of transportation. If you're going to ride them, do it safely and follow the rules of the road.

Medicine Safety: What You Can Do?

By: Lt. Cmdr. Brandon Hardin
US Naval Hospital Sigonella

Today's medicines cure infectious diseases, prevent problems from chronic disease, and alleviate pain for millions of people worldwide; however medicines can also cause harm. In the US, adverse drug events cause over 700,000 emergency department visits each year.

Patients and their families can do a number of things to help reduce the risk of harm from medicines. The most important thing everyone can do is to learn how to properly take, monitor, and store their medications.

What can you do? Know your medicines. Keep a list of the names of your medicines, how much you take, and when you take them. Include any over-the-counter medicines, vitamins, and nutritional or herbal supplements. Take this list to all of your doctor and pharmacy visits, and anytime your medicines change, change your list, too.

Follow the directions. Take your medicines exactly as prescribed, and never take medicines prescribed for someone else. Never chew, crush, or break any tablets or capsules unless instructed. Some long-acting medications are absorbed too quickly when not taken whole, which could be unsafe. Also, when taking or giving liquid medication, use only the cup or other measuring device provided. Household teaspoons and tablespoons vary in size, making them inaccurate. The Naval Hospital Pharmacy provides oral syringes specially made for dosing liquid medications.

Store medicines correctly. Keep medicines in their original containers. Many pills look alike, so by keeping them in

"A Priceless Leadership Trait"

The above quotation is one of the most memorable lines in history, uttered by the courageous Indigo Montoya. In the movie The Princess Bride a 1987 classic, Indigo Montoya was confused about the usage of the word "inconceivable." Indigo didn't really understand the meaning of this word. Vizzini, the Sicilian mastermind, used the word frequently throughout the movie. Indigo finally surmised the word didn't match Vizzini's usage, it was incongruent. It didn't make sense. He was baffled by the word. Leadership can be defined as influence. Leaders have followers, they lead by influence. In this article, I'm going to discuss a moral characteristic of leadership, one of the most important traits of leadership. The trait is integrity. The word is overused in our vernacular, in my opinion. So when the word is used to apply to someone that lacks authentic integrity, we are puzzled (like our good friend, Indigo). I wholeheartedly believe this trait is the most significant moral trait in a leader. When you hear the word integrity what image appears in your mind? Is it someone with high moral standards? Is it someone who's honest? We probably use some sort of mental scale in evaluating a leader's level of integrity. Etymologically, the word derives from Latin, integritas, meaning

"whole" or "complete." In modern English the word denotes, "the quality or state of being complete or undivided." The connotation is a person that lives consistently (undivided) with his/her beliefs. Hence, an authentic leader's words will match their actions. They mean what they say, and say what they mean. A person of integrity can be fully trusted. When an authentic leader says, "I care about you," the words are not meaningless. In his book Developing the Leader Within, John Maxwell poignantly states, "When I have integrity, my words and my deeds match up. I am who I am, no matter where I am or who I am with." One cartoon illustrates the lack of integrity has plagued our postmodern culture. The cartoon shows two middle-aged business men sitting together in a prison cell. One of the men laments, "All along, I thought our level of corruption fell within community standards." A leader with integrity has the ability to build trust. That kind of leader can be identified by their single-mindedness. They don't have divided loyalties, for that is duplicity. They are not mere pretenders, because that is hypocrisy. These type of leaders are often called authentic or genuine. People of integrity are guided by a set of core values that determine who they are. Maxwell eloquently says, "Our system of values is so much a part of us we cannot separate it from ourselves. It becomes the navigating system that guides us. It establishes priorities in our lives and judges what we will accept or reject." Now, we are all faced with conflicting desires; this ongoing battle is part of being human. Integrity is what guides us through our journey in this life. No human is perfect. We know that from experience. However, our integrity defines who we are. When a person of integrity blows it, they own it! They don't immediately start looking for the nearest scapegoat. The more cred-

Performance Key for Active, Reserve Senior Enlisted Continuation Board

From Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (NNS) -- Established last year for active duty and full time support E-7 through E-9 personnel, this year's board will also include selected reserve and voluntary training unit personnel with at least 19 years of service and three years time in rate.

According to the message, certain records are exempt from review by the board. Examples include Sailors with approved fleet Reserve/retire dates effective on or before June 30, 2011; personnel selected for command senior chief/master chief, or limited duty officer/warrant officer programs; those selected for advancement during the FY-11 boards; personnel enrolled in the Safe Harbor program; and fleet, force and command master chiefs.

"This is a performance-based board," said Vice Adm. Mark Ferguson, chief of naval personnel. "We want to retain those master chief, senior chief and chief petty officers that demonstrate the ability to generate positive results and command success through team and personal performance. These Sailors are vital in setting the tone of the fleet and providing a positive model to sustain our high-quality force."

Documented misconduct and substandard performance are the primary reasons a Sailor would not be continued, according to the message. The board will primarily focus on the previous five years of performance and will be looking for the following factors: substandard performance of duty, declining performance, failure to maintain physical fitness assessment standards, detachment for cause, removal of security clearance, military or civilian conviction or non-judicial punishment and administrative or personnel action for misconduct.

In addition, board members will consider a member's ability to produce and foster well trained enlisted and officer teams while providing sound proactive solutions linked to command and Navy mission accomplishments.

To ensure complete consideration of a Sailor's career, the Navy message also emphasizes that each eligible member is responsible for ensuring their record is correct and up-to-date with their latest evaluations, awards and other appropriate information.

"Check your official military personnel file on BUPERS Online, by logging into BOL and clicking on Web-Enabled Record Review. Here, Sailors can see their records exactly as they will be seen by the selection board," said Kathy Wardlaw, director, Records Management.

If needed, candidates may communicate with the continuation board by submitting a board package. Selection board packages provide candidates the opportunity to submit any missing documentation. Packages must be post marked not later than Aug. 16.

Members not selected for continuation will transfer to the fleet reserve or retire no later than June 30, 2011.

Commanding officers with personnel not selected for continuation will be notified so they may personally and confidentially notify the members.

Selection Boards Rescheduled, Promotions on Track

From Navy Personnel Command Public Affairs

MILLINGTON, Tenn. (NNS) -- Navy Personnel Command (NPC) has rescheduled the 2010 boards after a flash flood May 1 here caused delays, according to NAVADMIN 179/10.

Reconvening the senior chief board, which was in progress when the deluge hit, was a high priority according to Capt. Leo Falardeau, NPC's director of career progression. The E8 board is slated to reconvene June 14.

"Even as the flood waters rose, we knew the E-8 board would have to be reconstituted as soon as our systems came back up," he said. Promotions in senior enlisted grades as well as the chief induction period are tied to this board.

Now that NPC is recovering and the information technology systems that support selection boards are back online, the board spaces in Millington are buzzing with activity. "Luck was with us. Flood waters did not enter the selection board areas," Falardeau said. "We have increased the board membership numbers to ensure we make up for the lost days." The selection board revised schedule for 2010 is now posted on www.npc.navy.mil.

Communicating During Times of Change

Edited from Military One Source

Communicating well is always a challenge. But during changing times, it can be an even greater challenge. We tend to be less trusting of others when the environment around us is changing, to feel less secure and less valued. All of this can cause communication problems and misunderstandings. It can cause us to feel stressed and less enthusiastic about our work.

Below are some ways to communicate in positive ways in the military workplace during times of change.

1. Avoid the rumor mill.

Rumors spread more quickly during times of change. That's because when things are unclear, people tend to read into the situation and make up information to fill the gaps. Some of the rumors often heard during times of change include: "We're going to lose some billets." "The unit is going to deploy sooner than we thought." "The unit is going to deactivate." "We'll be getting a new commander."

Rumors take up a lot of energy. It's important not to let yourself get caught up in rumors and not to let rumors become your source of information. If you have heard a rumor or news about your unit's activities that worries you, go to your leadership or to someone reliable who has access to the right information and confirm what's true and what isn't.

Remember that during times of change at an organization, leaders may not have all the answers to questions. This can leave you feeling uncertain. Sometimes, such as when a unit is undergoing change, leaders may be limited as to what they can discuss with subordinates. Before spreading a rumor further, ask yourself, "Is there a reason to pass on this information?"

2. Talk with your leaders about what the change will mean for you.

One of the chief reasons change makes us uncomfortable is because we don't know how it will affect our jobs and our lives. In the absence of information, we may become apprehensive and jump to conclusions like: "With the reorganization, I'll have to do more work." "I'll never learn the new procedures." "I'll never be able to do this and my old job."

The sooner you can find out from leadership how your job will be affected by the change, the less uncertainty you'll feel and the easier it will be for you to accept the change. Your leaders may not have all the answers to your questions. But it's important to let them know you're concerned.

3. Ask for support from leadership to keep up with changes.

Even the most capable service members need additional training and help to meet new job demands and learn new systems and procedures.

4. Work to build positive relationships with fellow service members.

Good relationships among the members of the unit can help build trust and friendships that will see you through times of change and uncertainty. Building positive relationships sometimes means taking the first step and saying, "Do you want to take a break for lunch or coffee?" It means making a conscious effort to get to know people, and reaching out to others and checking in regularly to see how things are going. During busy times, even a voice mail you purposely leave after hours, when you know your co-worker isn't there to talk, is a way to show you care. "Hi, it's me. I was just calling to say I hope your project is going well. Call me if you want to talk."

5. Praise a job well done.

We all need to feel valued and to know that we are doing good work. This is more important than ever during times of change. When you notice a job well done, pick up the phone, send a note, or walk by and tell your co-worker, "You know, that was great. You did a really good job." Even leaders appreciate positive feedback, as in, "Thanks for noticing."

6. Turn to family and friends for support.

We often withdraw during times of crisis and change, when what we should be doing is staying connected with the people we care about and trust. Be open with your spouse about what you're going through. Don't cut yourself off from friends and co-workers who could offer you the support you need. Most people are eager to help; sometimes they just need to know you would welcome their support.

7. Work at resolving communication problems.

During times of change, when the pace at work may be hurried and people may be feeling uncertain, we often have shorter fuses. We can become less civil. We can forget to update each other. Poor communication can result in misunderstandings and strained relationships. Here are some strategies to help you handle communication problems:

- Resolve problems as soon as you can. While it's hard to talk about difficult issues, the longer you avoid communication and hold in negative feelings, the worse things become. Try to address problems when they come up, before they get too big to fix.

- Pinpoint what the problem is. Are you angry because your new commander has a different style of managing than your old one did? Are you frustrated because your workload is heavier than it was? Identify what's bothering you. Writing it down may help you clarify what you think.

- Set up a time to talk about the problem. This should be a planned meeting -- not a quick talk in the hallway. You might say to your fellow service member, "I'd like to talk about an issue that's worrying me. Could we arrange a time to sit down and talk?"

- Plan ahead what you are going to say. You want the conversation to stay controlled and focused. This is not a time to vent everything. So prioritize and limit what you hope to cover in the conversation. It helps to write down what you are going to say. Then practice it ahead of time.

- Make it clear from the start that your goal is to build a strong working relationship. You could begin by saying, "I'm glad we're talking, because I want to try to solve this problem that's been interfering with my work."

- Describe the problem. Be as specific as you can. Try to talk about the impact of the problem and to put it in a workplace context. For example, "My workload has really increased since we restructured. And I'm concerned I won't be able to meet all of my requirements."

- Make an effort to stay calm and not to sound argumentative or combative during the discussion. When you keep cool and calm, you're in control and open to what others are saying.

Religious Festival and Medieval Reenactment Celebrate the Past of Scicli

The past comes alive during the annual Scicli "Festa della Madonna delle Milizie" or Virgin Mary of the Armies Festival. One among the unique festivals in the Catholic world, this Festa celebrates an unusual devotion to the Blessed Mother of Jesus. In Southern Italy, Mary, the "highest of God's creatures," is usually venerated as a symbol of purity, spirituality and virtue, which are typical qualities of a perfect "Mother." Scicli's Madonna's tradition is quite different. She is depicted as a resolute warrior, who appears during a bloody battle to support the crusaders in their fight against the Saracens.

According to legend, that prodigious event occurred in 1091 in Donnalucata near Scicli, a small picturesque Baroque town located on a valley in the Ragusa province. Tradition has it that, despite being heavily outnumbered, the crusaders won the battle against the Saracens thanks to the prodigious intervention of the Virgin Mary's on the battlefield.

The Virgin Mary of the Armies, as townspeople renamed her after the exceptional event, appeared on a white horse wielding a flaming sword. Encouraged by the apparition, Christians bravely defeated the Muslim army and drove them out from Sicily.

Since then, Scicli's townspeople have been worshipping the Virgin Mary for centuries. A few years after the battle, a sanctuary was erected on the site of the fight to celebrate the miraculous apparition of Madonna delle Milizie who saved the city from the invaders. The sanctuary was then enlarged in 1391 and further restructured in 1721 after a terrible earthquake that had destroyed the town in 1693.

Burnt Coffins 'Fuel Naples Pizza Ovens'

(By Michael Day - independent.co.uk)

Naples - Investigators believe some pizza restaurants in Naples are using wood from stolen coffins to bake their famous pizzas. The southern city's favorite dish is said to rely on smoke from wood-fired stoves for its celebrated flavor.

But police think many restaurant owners across the notoriously lawless port are purchasing cut-price wood from a gang of coffin thieves operating in the city.

"A real suspicion hangs over pizza, one of the few remaining important symbols of the city, that it could be cooked with wood coffins," said Il Giornale, the daily paper which belongs to the family of Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi. "Not only the pizza, the bread too, may have been cooked with the wood." Naples prosecutor Giovandomenico Lepore is leading an investigation into the suspected racket.

Andrea Santoro, president of the city's cemetery commission, said: "It's no wonder these things are happening given the state of the cemeteries. There are graves uncovered, thefts and vandalism."

Il Giornale even claimed, without citing evidence, that there was now "a daily spectacle of uncovered coffins and human remains abandoned in the streets as if they were garbage".

Two years ago the city made headlines worldwide, again for the wrong reasons, when a refuse collection crisis saw tens of thousands of tons of stinking rubbish pile up on its streets.

Heroic American Mom Saves Son From Waves in Positano

(Story by LYNNETTE HINTZE and DILLON TABISH/Daily Inter Lake -DailyMail.co.uk)

The American woman who was swept out to sea and drowned Saturday evening in Italy — as she sacrificed herself to save her son — grew up in Kalispell and was a standout athlete at Flathead High School.

Sharrie Shelton Duncan, 48, was standing with her 12-year-old son, Shane, on a pier in the southern Italian resort town of Positano, watching the storm-whipped sea, when they were struck by a freak wave.

Witnesses said Sharrie was able to push her son toward rescuers before she was carried away by the water, according to a Reuters news report.

A bystander captured the scene on a mobile phone, and the dramatic video footage has been seen around the world.

"She's a heroine in my eyes," said Jack Therrien, a retired Columbia Falls pharmacist and Sharrie's cousin. "I think her being that athletic saved her son. No one seems to know why that big wave came up like it did."

A 1979 Flathead High School graduate, Sharrie is being remembered this week by friends and family as an incredible athlete and an incredible person.

"She had an infectious personality," said her brother, Randy Shelton of Billings. "She was totally nonjudgmental of other people, a real free spirit."

Another of Sharrie's cousins, Mary Ann Townsend of Bigfork, said she "was one of the nicest kids you'd ever want to know."

Sharrie and her husband, Gil Duncan, and their son had been living in Naples, Italy, for about a year, but had lived in Europe on and off because of Gil's job with Boeing. Their son was born in London.

"Sharrie would always want to experience the local flavor of wherever they lived," her brother recalled.

When they lived in London, she worked a couple of evenings a week at a local pub, just to experience the culture. Sharrie already had endeared herself to her neighborhood in Naples, he said. The local market closed in her honor when word of her death circulated.

It was Sharrie's athletic ability in so many sports that many Kalispell area residents still remember.

"Athletically she was one of the finest athletes I've ever been around," her brother said. "She was incredible."

He recounted how his sister, at just age 12, set a regional American Athletic Union record in the long jump, leaping more than 17 feet as a pre-teen. As a junior, the 5-foot, 3-inch dynamo broke the state record in the long jump, at 18

Italy's Beaches Cleaner and Greener Than Ever

(Story by ANSA)

Rome - Italy's beaches are cleaner and greener than ever before, according to an annual survey by the international Foundation for Environmental Education (FEE).

Crystal clear waters and pristine sands won 231 beaches in 117 resorts the prestigious Blue Flag award, four more than last year. This means around 10% of the country's beaches now boast a Blue Flag after passing FEE's strict tests for water quality and environmental management.

At a regional level, Liguria inched into first place above the Marche and Tuscany, which it tied with last year.

Liguria is now home to 17 Blue Flag resorts, one more than last year, compared to 16 in the Marche and Tuscany. Commenting on the results, Liguria's new tourism councilor Angelo Berlangieri described the awards as "an important sign of prestige and strength".

Abruzzo came fourth with 13 flags and Campania fifth with 12 flags.

Puglia added another resort to its list giving it 8 Blue Flags and joint sixth place with Emilia Romagna.

Veneto remained stable with six flags while Lazio counted five flags, one up from last year, bringing it level with Sicily and Calabria.

Friuli Venezia Giulia and Sardinia had two flags each, while Molise and Basilicata had just one.

Inland Piedmont, which has no coastal resorts, nevertheless chalked up two Blue Flags for its pristine lake sites.

FEE Secretary-General Claudio Mazza said the rise in Blue Flag resorts reflected a trend throughout Europe, in which tourists were increasingly sensitive to environmental issues.

"These figures are the result of a growing pressure from tourists over our environmental heritage," he said.

"As a consequence, local authorities are continually embarking on new challenges to improve their quality standards by making commitments to sustainability".

FEE examines thousands of beaches all over Europe every year, demanding that strict environmental criteria are met before its Blue Flags can be displayed.

Its study focuses on water quality, environmental information and education, environmental management, safety, cleanliness, provisions for waste and recycling, urban planning and strict zoning of different beach activities.

Italian beaches maintain their position in the world rankings for beach quality. The number of Blue Flag beaches, which recognizes the cleanliness of the bathing water but also eco-friendly services such as recycling, cycle paths and equal access for the disabled, has been growing. The beach of Menfi, near Agrigento, is one of the four Sicilian beaches that have been awarded the prestigious Blue Flag in 2010. The other three beaches are Pozzallo, Marina di Ragusa (Ragusa) and Fiumefreddo di Sicilia-Marina di Cottone (Catania). (ANSA)

Smokers in Italy Decline

(Story by ANSA)

The number of smokers in Italy fell in one year by 1.9 million, reducing the percentage of the population who smoke from 25.4% to 21.7%, according to a new report from the High Institute of Health (ISS). The report was drawn up in collaboration with the Italian League for the Fight Against cancer (Lilt) and the Mario Negri Institute and presented here on Tuesday ahead of the United Nations No Tobacco Day, May 31.

Of the 11.1 million Italians who still smoke, down from over 13 million a year ago, 5.9 million are men and 5.2 million women. The percentage of the male population who smoke dropped in one year by five full percentage points, from 28.9% to 23.9%, while the decline among women was more modest, 2.6 percentage points, from 22.3% to 19.7% of the population. This difference, some experts claim, is evidence that women, even though they smoke less than men, have a greater difficulty in quitting. This year's decline in the number of Italian smokers offset an unexpected hike in 2009, which reversed a downward trend begun when Italy adopted tough anti-smoking laws six years earlier. In its report last year, the ISS found that the percentage of Italian smokers rose from 22% to 25.4%, with the number of men smokers rising from 6.5 million to 7.1 million while women smokers jumped from 4.7 million to 6.5 million.

Thus while fewer men are smoking today than two years ago, the number of women smokers remains higher. According to the ISS, the increase in the number of smokers "in part responded to a decrease in the number of ex-smokers, who represented 18.4% of the population in 2008 and today 14.6%". This meant that many people who were able to kick the habit were hooked once again. Based on this year's data, the percentage of the Italian population who smoke is now below 2008 levels.

The Filipino-American Association and the Heritage Committee will be spearheading an evening of songs, dances, and Asian-Pacific cuisine on Sunday, June 6th, 2010 at 3:00 p.m.

The month of May is Asian Pacific American Heritage Month, a time to commemorate and celebrate the many accomplishments and contributions of immigrant, refugee, and American born Asian-Americans and Pacific Islanders who through sacrifice, perseverance, education, government, and leadership have helped transform this country into the greatest and most benevolent nation in history. Early Asian Pacific-Americans worked long hours for little pay and were discriminated against just for being different. Today, Asian Pacific-Americans earn more, own more, and are better educated than all other American minorities (U.S. Census, 2007). It is through vision, sacrifice, and perseverance that Asian Pacific-Americans have accomplished so much since they first arrived in this land of opportunity in 1843. Let us take time this month of May to celebrate the many achievements and contributions Asian Pacific-Americans have made to the United States.

If you want to take in a new hobby or if you want to advance your photography skills, this club is for you. The Sigonella Photography Club is looking for new members to join for discussions on how to take better pictures, camera care, photo challenges, processing and monthly field trips. We meet every first Wednesday of each month at the Marinai Community Center at 6PM. For more information contact Angela Andrieux x-0681 or find us on Facebook by searching for "Sigonella Photography Club".

It's PCS Season! Are Your Pets Vaccines Up To Date?

In order to travel by air, dogs and cats must have a rabies vaccine less than a year old and more than 30 days old. Pets must also have a valid health certificate. If you are traveling by military air, health certificates can be provided at the Veterinary Treatment Facility located on NAS I within 14 days of travel. If you are flying commercial, an official Italian veterinarian must examine your animal within 6 days of travel. More information on commercial travel is available at the clinic. Please stop by for our PCS packet which will walk you through getting an Italian health certificate.

The veterinarian will be TDY 10-13 May, 21-31 May, and 7-11 June. Vaccinations cannot be given during this time, so please plan ahead and make sure your pet's rabies vaccine will be 30 days or older at the time of travel. If you are PCSing anywhere other than the continental United States, please ask your sponsor for specific pet import requirements. For example, pets traveling to Hawaii must start the process at least 120 days from expected arrival date! Please plan ahead and call the vet clinic at 624-4258 if you have any questions.

CELEBRATING THE FO

An Introduction From M

Story

Since ancient times inhabitants and visitors of Sicily have marveled at Mt. Etna. In present times it is her wines that are slowly receiving the marvel. In fact, last month at VinItaly (one of the most important wine shows for Italian wines held annually in Verona, Italy) the interest in Etna wines was at an all time high. For sure, it has been a well known fact that Mt. Etna's soil, originating from its many lava flows, is rich in many nutrients and moreover, the difference in temperatures from night to day make the microclimate for growing grapes uniquely ideal. However, it is also the indigenous grapes that make up Etna's DOC Rosso, Rosato and Bianco that have the potential to create prized fine wines. They can come as a welcome change from the fruity, jammy Nero d'Avola, Sicily's most widely planted red grape that hogs most of the international lime-light. In contrast, Etna Rossos are delicate while Etna's Biancos are crisp.

Mt. Etna's winemaking history changed dramatically after WWII. Prior to this timeframe the idea was to produce as many grapes as possible in the smallest amount of space. All grapes were grown together and pressed together and made into one "wine." The must (grape juice) was then placed in big, cement vats for a few weeks before developing into wine in gigantic chestnut barrels. The wine was not consumed here in Sicily but sent on the train to Riposto, where the wine was loaded onto ships and sent up north to become a filler to intensify northern wines in Italy and France. After the Second World War, some wineries began to separate the white grapes since they were ready to be harvested first and made into a separate white wine. The red grapes were harvested a few weeks to a month later and became Etna Rosso. Sure, some wineries still use those gigantic chestnut barrels but this is becoming a thing of the past and French oak barrels, now are used to make the premium wines.

The Soil, The Vineyards and Vine Training Methods

Just simply winding along the narrow roads circling Etna, it is not difficult to notice a difference in the aesthetics of the vineyards here from those on the rest of the island. The tiered lava stone terracing, the freestanding thick, twisted vines and the lack of formal maintenance make for an almost primitive look. I must admit that it is easy to become a bit enamored with this more wild and natural appearance. There are specific reasons for this look, though. The terracing in the espresso-like rich soil provides better exposure to the sun and better drainage since the water cannot pool in large areas very easily. Three times a year the soil around each vine is moved around by hand tools and a well is created around the vine to collect water. Maintaining a vineyard with this type of terracing is, therefore, inherently more costly when you have to pay your workers to maintain the vineyard by hand because tractors cannot fit. And thus, the vineyards do not look as pristine or well kept. The freestanding thick twisted vines are referred to as the "alberello" method of vine training. There has been a resurgence of using this more traditional way to grow grapes versus the French way by stringing the vines along wire and assisting their growth upward even with Nero d'Avola in the south of Sicily near Noto. In its most simple terms the theory of the alberello method is that if the vine needs to struggle to maintain its form freestanding the grapes will be a stronger more flavorful fruit. Moreover, there has been a radical evolution in pruning the vines to produce more quality fruit on contrast to as many grapes as possible because now the wine is made for quality and not quantity.

The Grapes, the Wines and the Growing Zones

Mt. Etna's indigenous grapes are fascinating in themselves. Carricante, Cataratto Bianco and Minella Bianca are grapes that are harvested in September. Carricante and a blend of other grapes make up the Etna Bianco. What is interesting to know about it is its ability to age. Bianco wine worthy of aging is rare, except for the wineries up on the mountain one knows for sure how to cellar. Minella is a red grape that is making a comeback as a woman's breast in Sicily. The unique shape of the grape is one of the most widely grown in Sicily and the main indigenous grape. There are different species of grapes and one grows on Etna. The DOC needs this grape to make the more acidic Carricante. Etna Bianco DOC try and use a mix of citrus, dried fruit and pears.

Nerello Cappuccio and Nerello Mascalese are the two red grapes. The Carricante Rosato DOC recipes call for 80% Nerello Mascalese and 20% Nerello Cappuccio. These grapes have been described as the Nebbiolo grape of Barolo or France's Burgundy. The Carricante wine can be unbelievably good. These two grapes to create a wine has recently been a trend. It will not be long until the red wine gets notice. When tasting the wine, hints of strawberry, cherry and currant.

The Etna DOC zone has been recognized by the Government since 1980. The zone stretches from Sant'Alfò to Randazzo. This DOC zone is not querable if it is broken. The zone is South-East, comprising the municipalities of Pedara, Trecastagni, and Randazzo, on the side, comprising the town

Another important thing to remember is that although a winery is located in a particular place (usually because the land has been in a family for generations and generations), many wineries buy grapes from different parts of the Volcano within the Etna DOC zone and make the wines in their cantinas because it is generally thought that some grapes thrive in particular areas. But again, this theory is still undergoing much experimentation. In future articles

I hope to explore these three sections separately and highlight individual wineries in each.

Suggested Food Pairings

Something almost magical occurs when you drink wine from the place where it was made and with the food of the area. Mt. Etna is not without its own unique food specialties. The whites go well with olives, sundried tomatoes, pecorino and provolone cheeses as well as seafood from down the mountain. Try the Rosso with Pasta with sauces made from pis-tachios from Bronte or with Etna mushrooms, grilled meats and salami.

Etna Wineries and Cantine Aperte

The perfect chance to visit some wineries around Etna nearby is Sunday May 27, 2007.

The event is called Cantine Aperte, which means that the following list of wineries are open to the public for free wine tastings and tours between the hours of 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

This list is by no means exhaustive of all the wineries on Etna but I am sure you will find a few that you haven't already been to on the list. Many wineries in the rest of Sicily are open on this day as well. Please check out www.movimentoturismovino.it for more information.

Go Green Sigonella!

Why to Go Green

Article by:
www.planetgreen.discovery.com

You've probably noticed that green is everywhere these days--in the news, politics, fashion, and even technology. You can hardly escape it on the Internet, and now with the Planet Green TV network, you can even enjoy eco-friendly entertainment 24 hours a day. That's all great as far as we're concerned, but with a million messages and ideas coming at us from all sides, it can be easy to get caught up in the quotidian stuff--switching to organic foods, turning down the thermostat, recycling, say -- without thinking about the big picture of how your actions stack up. Worse, you could even be suffering from a little green "fatigue" -- that is, tuning out the green messages due to their ubiquity.

While it's easy to get overwhelmed, it's also simple to begin making a positive impact. Since it's helpful to understand the big picture when it comes to setting to smaller goals, we've adjusted our focus for this guide--a departure from our typical "how to go green" content, which typically tackles very specific topics such as kitchens, cars, or pets -- to take a broader look at the reasons behind why we should go green.

As globalization makes the world become smaller, it becomes increasingly easy to see how the lives of people (and plants and animals and ecosystems) everywhere are closely synced up with one another. So toys made in China can affect the quality of life in Europe, pesticides used in Argentina can affect the health of people in the U.S., and greenhouse gas emissions from Australia can affect a diminishing rainforest in Brazil.

The truth is that everything single thing we do every day has an impact on the planet -- good or bad. The good news is that as an individual you have the power to control most of your choices and, therefore, the impact you create: from where you live to what you buy, eat, and use to light your home to where and how you vacation, to how you shop or vote, you can have global impact. For example, did you know that 25 percent of Western pharmaceuticals are derived from flora that come from the Amazon rainforest? And that less than one percent of these tropical trees and plants have been tested by scientists? These numbers suggest that we all have a large (and growing) personal stake in the health and vitality of places far and near. In addition to protecting biodiversity (and inspiring medicine), rainforests are also excellent carbon sinks. Bottom line: It benefits everyone on the planet to help keep our wild spaces alive and growing. But embracing a greener lifestyle isn't just about helping to preserve equatorial rain forests, it can also mean improving your health, padding your bank account, and, ultimately, improving your overall quality of life. All that and you can save furry animals, too? Why wouldn't anyone want to go green? Keep reading for all the important, big-picture details.

during the battle are brought back to life through a spectacular historic reenactment that will be presented on Saturday, May 29. The performance, which is definitely worth to be seen for the accurate reconstruction of medieval costumes and background setting, begins at 8 p.m. in piazza Italia, the main square. Later on in the evening, spectacular fireworks will follow at midnight.

The procession, during which the statue of the Virgin Mary is carried through out the city, will be held tonight (May 28) and will leave from the cathedral around 6 p.m.

The appearance of a precious 19th century papier-mâché statue representing the Virgin Mary on a horseback is undoubtedly the highlight of the show. According to historic chronicles, that reenactment has been staged since the 15th century. In 1736, the Vatican recognized the authenticity of the miracle performed by the "warrior" Blessed Mary.

The statue, which is permanently kept in Scicli's cathedral, was recently restored. The show also features the landing of the Saracen pirate ship named Stambul as well as spectacular battle scenes.

As Sicilian anthropologist Pitre wrote, in the past, this festival was celebrated on the Saturday preceding the Palm Sunday. At that time, the statue used to be taken up to the feet, 9.25 inches.

That record was beaten the following year by her teammate Lexie Miller, now Lexie Miller Beck.

"I know that I wouldn't have my state record if it weren't for Sharrie," Beck said Tuesday in Kalispell. "She taught me how to hitch kick and it added about a foot to my long jump and made me a better long jumper than she was, and that was so selfless."

Sharrie was a member of the legendary Bravettes track squad that won three consecutive Class AA state championships in the late 1970s. According to the Daily Inter Lake archives, "the point total and performances [at the 1979 state meet] were more than what Flathead coach Joe McKay could have asked for."

McKay was quoted after the win, saying, "I'm especially pleased with Sharrie Shelton who took second in the short hurdles and a third in the long hurdles. She had her best times in both of those races."

During her high-school years, she also set a long-jump record of just over 19 feet at the Meet of Champions, an all-class state track meet.

Beck recalled the special relationship she had with Sharrie on the track:

"When we competed we ran on relays against each other, we jumped against each other, we ran the 100 and the hurdles, we always competed against each other. Early on she beat me all the time and later on I started to beat her, but it never ever felt like a competition. She was happy when I did well, I was happy when she ran well."

And it wasn't only on the track where Sharrie shined.

Her father, Chuck Shelton, recalled what an extraordinary swimmer his daughter was. He paused to contemplate the irony, and said there was no overcoming the power of the undercurrent that swept her away on the Italian seashore.

Chuck and his wife, Patty Seaman, Sharrie's stepmother, now live in Phoenix.

Sharrie won multiple state championships in diving and was an award-winning swimmer as well.

All the children in the Shelton family — brother Randy and sisters Staci Jo and Shayne — were exceptional athletes. Randy remembers a photo published in the Inter Lake titled "The Diving Sheltons."

"She was an accomplished horsewoman," her father recalled.

Sharrie's hunter-jumper trainer marveled at her skills after just one first week at that sport.

Her gymnastics coach likewise saw exceptional ability in Sharrie, her brother said. He and Sharrie were members of the Hot Shots tumbling group that performed regionally in the 1970s.

Beck said she saw Sharrie in August 2009 at their 30th high school reunion.

"Seeing her then, it was as if it had been only a couple weeks since we'd seen each other," Beck recalled.

Beck said Sharrie had been planning to visit Kalispell in a couple of weeks.

"She was just full of life and everybody loved her and she loved everybody," Beck summed up about her teammate and friend. "She was so positive." A memorial service will be held in Kalispell in the next few weeks.

Sharrie's mother, Margie, of Southern California, and her two sisters traveled to Italy. They will bring back the cremated remains, which will be laid to rest in Glacier Memorial Gardens, Randy Shelton said.

As reported by dailymail.co.uk, locals questioned the wisdom of being on the jetty given the stormy seas. One woman said: 'I shouted at her to move because it was dangerous but she just said one more picture, one more picture - then she went in.' Paramedic Gino Esposito said: 'There are no warning signs. Perhaps there should be - but common sense says you should not be on that jetty when the sea is so rough.'

'As soon as we saw what happened, we jumped into the water,' said Matteo Lucibello, a local fisherman, was quoted as saying.

The City Council has agreed to award medals of valor to the bystanders who tried to save Mrs Duncan

Sudoku Rules

Rows

There are 9 rows in a traditional Sudoku puzzle. Every row must contain the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9. There may not be any duplicate numbers in any row. In other words, there can not be any rows that are identical.

Columns

Sudoku Rule For Columns There are 9 columns in a traditional Sudoku puzzle. Like the Sudoku rule for rows, every column must also contain the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9. Again, there may not be any duplicate numbers in any column. Each column will be unique as a result.

Regions

Sudoku Rule For Regions A region is a 3x3 box like the one shown to the left. There are 9 regions in a traditional Sudoku puzzle.

Like the Sudoku requirements for rows and columns, every region must also contain the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9. Duplicate numbers are not permitted in any region. Each region will differ from the other regions.

In summary, the Sudoku rule is: Complete the Sudoku puzzle so that each and every row, column, and region contains the numbers one through nine only once.
