Detainees skirmish with JTF guards

By Kathleen T. Rhem, American Forces Press Service

A bogus suicide attempt last week lured guards into a 10-man detainee bay where an attack awaited them, the admiral in charge of the U.S. detention facility at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, told reporters. Two other detainees had attempted suicide earlier in the day.

The large skirmish in Camp 4, the only medium-security facility at GTMO, began around 6:30 p.m. when guards were searching all cells in response to earlier incidents in other camps.

However, he added, officials “consider this to be the most dangerous camp, because detainees have the opportunity to plan and act out in groups.”

A quick-reaction force of 10 guards responded when a detainee was seen hanging sheets from the ceiling and making as if to hang himself. Harris explained that guards are taught to respond to save the detainee’s life but also to consider the possibility that such a gesture is intended to lure guards into a cell.

When guards entered the bay to prevent the detainee from hanging himself, the 10 detainees in that bay attacked them. Harris said the detainees had “slickened the floor in their block with feces, urine and soapy water in an attempt to trip the guards.” They then attacked the guards with broken light fixtures, fan blades and “bits of metal.”

Harris and Army Col. Mike Bumgarner, commander of the Joint Detention Group, explained that the guards used a “continuum of force” to quell the disturbance. Continuum of force is a law-enforcement term used to explain that guards or officers start with the lowest level of force and escalate until they reach the appropriate level of force for the situation at hand.

In this case, guards started with verbal commands to cease the actions, then quickly moved to using pepper spray. Within a matter of minutes they progressed to physical force and finally to using nonlethal weapons, which allowed the guards to end the skirmish within five minutes.

Officials did not call for the use of nonlethal crowd-control measures until two guards were on the ground after detainees jumped on them from the beds and leaders determined their lives could be at risk, Bumgarner said.

Guards fired five .12-gauge shotgun rounds with rubber pellets and one “sponge-type grenade” from an M-203 grenade launcher.

The detainees who started the disturbance were then moved to a maximum-security facility after being examined by medical personnel, Harris said.

While authorities worked to end the fighting in the first bay, detainees in two other bays began acting out by damaging their accommodations, de-

CJCS sends annual spouses' appreciation message

American Forces Press Service

This month we honor the extraordinary contributions of the men and women who serve our country in the Armed Forces.

I am proud to serve alongside 2.4 million Americans in the Active, Guard and Reserve Force who have chosen to take the oath to defend our Constitution.

Whether deployed in Iraq or Afghanistan, or supporting humanitarian operations at home or abroad, today's military personnel continue to serve this Nation with honor and distinction.

In a month honoring the military, it is only fitting that on the 12th of May we specifically recognize military spouses - our silent heroes.

They serve beside those in uniform, selflessly relocating our homes and assuming new responsibilities at each assignment.

They understand long hours, exercises and deployments and give us strength to drive on when duty calls.

On behalf of the Joint Chiefs, I join all Americans and extend a sincere thanks to the men and women of our Armed Forces and their families.

Naval Hospital advises on contact solution recall

By JO1 Igo Wordu, Naval Station Public Affairs

U.S. Naval Hospital Guantanamo Bay is asking all base contact lens users to immediately stop using the contact lens solution ReNu with MoistureLoc. The warning came as Bausch & Lomb, in conjunction with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (USFDA), expanded the recall of this product worldwide.

LT Manuel Zambrano, staff optometrist at the hospital advises Guantanamo Bay residents to be concerned but not alarmed.

“Out of the 100 related cases worldwide, more than 35 million Americans continue to wear contact lenses as a safe alternative to glasses and laser corrective eye surgery.”

Zambrano said the decision follows increasing evidence regarding a potential eye infection that could result in blindness.

“Some aspect of the MoistureLoc formula could increase the relative risk of eye infection in certain unusual circumstances,” he said.

He said infections caused by the product are not life-threatening. However, Zambrano advised contact lens users who have used the product to contact the hospital immediately if they experience symptoms such as sudden blurred vision, red eye, pain, light sensitivity, or eye tearing.

“Contact lens wearers using this product should switch to an alternative solution,” said Zambrano. “We are also educating our patients on how to prevent this problem by reviewing the basics of contact lens care.”

It is not the first time the product has been recalled. Earlier this year, complaints leveled by those who used the product prompted a nationwide recall for the product by the manufacturer.

Basel receives Security Studies Award

By Linda Cassada, Hampden-Sydney College

Hampden-Sydney College senior Christian Paul Basel recently received the Military Leadership/National Security Studies Program Certificate from Dr. Walter M. Bortz III, President of the College; Dr. David E. Marion, Director of the Wilson Center; and Dr. James Simms, Elliott Professor of History.

Christian, a history major, is a member of the Hampden-Sydney Men's Chorus, the College Republicans, the Madisonian Society, and the Baptist Student Union. He was the recipient of the C.T. Crawley Music Award in his sophomore year. Christian is a graduate of W.T. Sampson High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Craig T. Basel.

The school is ranked nationally by U.S. News & World Report. It first enrolled students in 1175 and is known for its traditional liberal arts curriculum, and unique focus on the needs of young men.

VA urges caution after veterans' ID theft

By Samantha L. Quigley, American Forces Press Service

Veterans Affairs officials announced the theft of personal information on up to 26.5 million veterans. However, VA Secretary R. James Nicholson stressed there's no indication the information is being used for purposes of fraud.

"We at the VA have recently learned that an employee here, a data analyst, took home a considerable amount of electronic data from the VA, which he was not authorized to do," Nicholson said. "His home was burglarized, and this data was stolen."

The compromised data includes names, Social Security numbers and birthdates of veterans separating from the military since 1975, he said. The information also may have included data on veterans who separated before 1975 but who submitted a claim for VA benefits.

No medical or financial information was compromised, though the files might have contained numeric disability ratings in some cases, Nicholson added. A statement issued by the department indicated that spousal information also might have been compromised in some cases.

"There is no indication that any use is being made of this data or even that (the thieves) know they have it," Nicholson said.

Exercising what the secretary called "an abundance of caution," the department is working through a number of channels, including the news media, to make veterans aware of the situation. Individual notification letters also will be mailed to veterans.

The department is providing more information through the www.firstgov.gov Web site and call centers that can be reached at (800) 333-4636. The call centers, which will be active today, will be able to handle more than 250,000 calls a day.

"The most important priority that I have right now is to get the word out to our veterans and get them alerted and aware of this possibility," Nicholson said.

The department also is encouraging veterans to watch their financial accounts carefully for any signs of fraud or identity theft. If suspicious activity is detected, veterans should contact the fraud department of one of the three major credit bureaus: Equifax, Experian or TransUnion.

Nichols said the Federal Trade Commission has alerted credit bureaus of a potential increase in requests for fraud alerts and for requests for credit reports.

Any accounts that have been tampered with or opened fraudulently should be closed, and the veteran should file a report with local police or the police in the community where the identity theft took place. Those who suspect identity theft also are encouraged to contact the Fed-

Royal treatment for 'GTMO Girls'

By Carine Topal

The 'Beauty Brigade' has done it again! Stephanie's Manhattan converted part of the Windjammer Club into a virtual salon, bustling with activity as women trooped in for a make-over session.

The women of Guantanamo Bay eagerly made appointments to be pumpkin-peeled, waxed, and papaya-masked.

Additionally, Stephanie used her artistic skills applying permanent make-up to brows and eyes.

Faces shined and eyes brightened as the 'Beauty Brigade' began work early each morning, and continued until the evening.

The goal was to bring the glamour of the big city to GTMO, where the women of the base, affectionately referred to as 'GTMO Girls,' were to be primped and taken care of, with or without an appointment.

The belief that every woman should have the opportunity to beautify herself, even miles away from salon, was certainly evident.

Stephanie's philosophy of 'Do good and spread the good around' has served her well. She brings cheer and treats to those who really deserve to be supported. If Stephanie can put smiles on the 'GTMO Girls', then she has done her job.

But the royal treatment the women of Guantanamo Bay received was in turn lavished upon Stephanie and her team: 'GTMO Girls' were sweet and gracious, offering hugs and thank-yous, making the five days in Cuba a joy.

At the end of the stay, it was difficult to tell who was treated more royally.

One thing is certain: The Beauty Brigade is ready to serve again soon!

Detainees skirmish with guards ...

stroying fans, light fixtures and security cameras.

Bumgarner said officials have estimated the property damage at $110,000.

Officials later determined the initial act was not a legitimate suicide attempt but a ruse to get guards into the bay. In all, six detainees were treated for minor injuries, Bumgarner said.

Guards first responded to a medical emergency in Camp 1, a maximum-security facility within Camp Delta, when a detainee was discovered unconscious after missing morning prayer, Harris said.

Later, around noon, a second detainee complained of dizziness and nausea after taking five pills.

"Not knowing if this was another suicide attempt, we locked down the camps and began a total search of each cell, realizing that this process would take several hours," Harris said.

In the end, officials determined that this second detainee had not attempted suicide but was having a reaction to medication prescribed to him for latent tuberculosis. That individual is fine now, Harris said.

Shortly thereafter, guards found a stash of drugs hidden in a detainee's toilet. Minutes after this, guards found another detainee frothing at the mouth when they arrived to search his cell. Harris said this was another suicide attempt.

Both individuals are being treated at the GTMO Naval Hospital, where they are in stable condition but were still unconscious this afternoon, Harris said.

Officials determined the men had ingested "large quantities of the benzodiazepine family of drugs." This type of drug is commonly used to treat anxiety or insomnia.

Harris said neither of the men was prescribed the medication they took.

Officials theorize that several detainees surreptitiously hoarded their prescribed medication for an unknown period of time to pass to these "two jihadists who ... either they wanted to be the suicides or they were told to be the suicides."

Medical personnel at GTMO dispense about 1,000 pills a day to 200 to 300 detainees, Harris said. "That's a very difficult thing to track," he said.

"The guard force and the medical staff do their best to ensure that the detainees are not squirreling away meds, but when you're dispensing that quantity of meds to that quantity of detainees, some get by us."

Two other detainees also complained of nausea and dizziness, and one of them stated that he had tried to kill himself but didn't have enough drugs. Medical officials believe these two are "attention-seeking sympathizers," but were not seriously trying to kill themselves.

Since detainees were first brought to GTMO in Jan. 2002, no detainee has died at the facility. Including yesterday's attempts, there have been 41 suicide attempts from a total of 25 detainees, Harris said.

About 750 detainees have been through the base, and about 460 currently are held there.

In his comments to the press, Harris said the guards performed "magnificently yesterday, showing remarkable restraint in the face of considerable danger." He also praised the medical staff involved and credited them with saving the lives of the two detainees who attempted suicide.

Harris said officials believe the detainees were seeking attention by causing the disturbance in Camp 4.

"This illustrates to me the true nature of the men we have detained here," Harris said today.

"They are dangerous men and committed jihadists who will do whatever it takes to kill an American here, even killing themselves to get to that point."

New sea/shore rotation policy announced

By JO2 Amie Hunt, Navy Personnel Command Communications Office

For the first time in more than four years, the Navy's sea/shore rotation policy is being updated to better match the Navy's billet base at sea and on shore.

The updated policy, contained in NAVADMIN 130/06, announces modifications to existing tour lengths, which were last revised in December 2001 (NAVADMIN 341/01).

"Getting the correct sea/shore rotation across the fleet is the first step toward creating a future force," said Vice Adm. John C. Harvey Jr., Chief of Naval Personnel.

"We have been making assignments based on a sea/shore rotation that reflects the billet base of 2001 and does not take into account the almost 19,600 enlisted shore duty billets that have been programmed for elimination to date."

Earlier this year, a Sea/Shore Rotation Working Group convened to determine the optimal sea/shore rotation in the Navy. Chartered by the Chief of Naval Personnel, the group will continue analyzing and working on solutions to ensure sea/shore rotations match the needs of the fleet forces and look at short and long-term challenges with the policy.

"As the force structure changes, the sea component has remained relatively constant. So, reduction has been taken on the shore side of the house, as either the work goes away or as civilian positions are brought online changing the billet structure," said Capt. George Taylor, director of enlisted distribution at Navy Personnel Command (NPC).

To develop this policy, the emphasis was first placed on properly manning sea duty and the front line operational units. Currently, 790 rates/ratings/NECs (Navy Enlisted Classifications) make up the Navy's sea/shore rotation force.

Of these, 150 will have an increase to their sea duty time, with most seeing a change of six months or less.

Forty will increase eight to 12 months, and only five will increase more than 12 months. On average, sea tour lengths for E-5 to E-9 will increase from 47 months to 51 months, while shore tour lengths will increase from 34 to 36 months.

"The billet base changes over the last four years have caused an imbalance from a distribution of assets perspective.

This sea/shore rotation will help us ensure proper manning at sea and allow us to better align our billet base to the mission," said Cmdr. Tom Trotto, PERS 40 special assistant at Navy Personnel Command.

Sailors within their nine-month window to negotiate for orders will be able to proceed with those orders.

NPC will adjust Sailor projected rotation dates based on length of tour remaining.

Projected rotation dates (PRD) of February 2007 or earlier will not be adjusted. "Our first priority is to properly man our sea duty and front line operational unit," Harvey said.

Future updates from the Sea/Shore Rotation Working Group will be provided as the group continues working to better align fleet and mission requirements while providing more predictable career tracks for Sailors.

eral Trade Commission via its identity-theft hotline at (877) 438-4338, or through its Web site.

There is no indication when the career employee removed the information from his office, but the data was stolen when his home was burglarized sometime this month, Nicholson said. He declined to identify the employee or where he lives but said law enforcement officials reported several burglaries in the area and they do not believe the stolen information was targeted.

“The employee has been placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of (a full-scale) investigation,” Nicholson said. All appropriate law enforcement agencies, including the FBI and the Veterans Affairs Department’s Inspector General are participating in the investigation.

Members of the President’s Identity Theft Task Force will meet today to coordinate a comprehensive response, recommend ways to further protect affected veterans, and increase safeguards to prevent the reoccurrence of such incidents, Nicholson said. VA officials also moved up the date by which all department employees must complete the “VA Cyber Security Awareness Training Course” and the “General Employee Privacy Awareness Course.” Both must be completed by June 30. Additionally, Veterans Affairs will immediately begin conducting a review of all current positions requiring access to sensitive information. All employees requiring access to such data will undergo updated law enforcement and background checks.
