

USNH to renovate Dental Clinic

The U.S. Naval Hospital Guantanamo Bay (USNH) will undergo major renovation beginning March 19 that will be ongoing for a four to six month period.

We apologize for any inconvenience that this will cause our customers, but the end result will be improved services to our community.

The areas affected include the Command Suite and Administrative offices on the first floor and the Dental Clinic on the second floor. The first floor offices will be relocated to various areas on the second floor.

All phone numbers will remain the same and signs will indicate new locations.

The Dental Clinic renovation is long overdue and is a facilities upgrade that has been in the planning stage for the last three years.

The clinic's 'face lift' is a major facilities renovation to expand services. In order to accomplish this, however, dental services will be temporarily relocated outside the facility to a double room mobile van located in the patient parking lot by the emergency room.

Because our capacity will be reduced by 60 percent and laboratory spaces lost during this time, prosthetic fabrication and repair services will be unavailable as well as other laboratory intensive services.

The dental appointment desk will be located just inside the facility off the loading dock and around the corner from the emergency room. Again, signs will be posted to assist our customers.

Cmdr. Bill Wright has worked a creative schedule to provide as many appointments as possible. To do this, some appointments will be offered after normal working hours.

However, to ensure that our Active Duty population is served, priority for appointments will be given to uniformed personnel and their family members as well as dental emergencies.

Joint Task force personnel will continue to receive Dental Services at KB JAS as before, however specialty services may also be limited. Access will be available to other base residents on a limited space-available basis.

Due to the renovation, part of our command suite parking in the rear of the hospital will be temporarily closed. This may affect patient parking once again at the hospital. This temporary relocation of dental services will impact access to care for all.

CNO Signs New Diversity Policy

Story by MC2 (SW) Rebekah Blowers

CNO Public Affairs

Chief of Naval Operations (CNO) Adm. Gary Roughead recently issued the Navy's diversity policy in which he urges leaders to anticipate and embrace the demographic changes of tomorrow, and build a Navy that always reflects the make up of the country.

"The purpose of this policy is to ensure that everyone in the Navy understands how I feel about diversity. I believe that diversity is the responsibility of every leader, both military and civilian. Each leader must set and live the example, as well as create an environment in our Navy where every individual's contribution is valued and respected," he said. "Most importantly, the Navy must reflect the face of the nation. When the nation looks at its Navy, it should see itself reflected back."

Leadership is the foundation upon which the Navy is built and has served as the cornerstone of success for the organization since its inception. CNO has entrusted and challenges all members of the Navy team to lead diversity efforts through leadership, mentorship, service and example.

"I want our Navy's leaders to internalize this policy and demonstrate a personal commitment to attract young men and women to the Navy, and compel them to stay Navy. For those who are currently serving in our Navy, we must mentor these young people and provide opportunities for them to reach and maximize their fullest potential," Roughead said.

CNO emphasized that we all bring abundant life experiences and perspectives, and approach challenges and problems in various ways. It is these very talents and perspectives that make the Navy so successful, he said. Diversity is a necessity to remain a competitive, relevant and strong global force for peace.

"As an organization that's diverse at all levels, infused with many perspectives, we become stronger, more talented, more capable, and more effective. At the end of the day this is what our country wants and this is what our country deserves, a Navy that is out and about doing what it needs to do with the support of its country and the strength of its diversity to move forward," Roughead said.

Taco Bell Express, renovated KFC to open soon

Story by MC2 Kim Williams

NAVSTA PAO

The long awaited Taco Bell Express is expected to open March 24 in GTMO.

The restaurant will feature a menu similar to those found at Taco Bell Express locations found state-side.

According to Morale, Welfare and Recreation Director Craig Basel, the majority of the items most popular at Taco Bell will be available at the GTMO location.

The 2008 Navy Ball Committee is currently raffling off tickets for Taco Bell patrons to win head of the line privilege on opening day. The raffle winner will still be responsible for purchasing his own meal.

Also opening March 24 is a full service KFC, complete with chicken on the bone, something GTMO residents have sacrificed when dining at the previous location! Diners will now have the opportunity to purchase a bucket of original recipe chicken.

The A&W restaurant will also reopen without any menu changes. The new food court will be located in the bowling center across the street from Denich Gym.

Lawmakers argue for bigger veterans budget

Story by Rick Maze

Navy Times

Republican members of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee — who for seven years have defended the Bush administration's funding requests for veterans programs — now want to add $5.8 billion to the White House request for 2009.

The budget for the Department of Veterans Affairs requested by the 12 Republicans is about $2 billion more than the VA budget recommendations from the Democratic majority.

Rep. Steve Buyer, R-Ind., the committee's ranking minority member, said the budget requests about $2 billion to be set aside to improve GI Bill education benefits for members of the National Guard and reserve, about $2.5 billion for medical care and services, $700 million for major construction, $200 million for minor construction and $644 million for cemetery construction.

The rest of the funding would be spread among other programs, including $320 million to improve information technology, a Buyer priority.

Democrats sent their own request, asking for a $3.8 billion increase over the $44.8 billion discretionary budget requested for VA next year by the Bush administration. The biggest difference is that Democrats, led by committee chairman California Rep. Bob Filner, did not ask for a specific amount for GI Bill increases.

Democrats are seeking a $2.5 billion increase in health care funding, roughly the same as Republicans, while rejecting a Bush plan to set enrollment fees for veterans' health care and to raise prescription drug co-pays for veterans who have service-connected disabilities and at least modest incomes.

New York christened

Naval Support Activity New Orleans PAO

The Navy's newest amphibious transport dock was christened "New York" March 1, at the Northrop Grumman Shipbuilding New Orleans Shipyard at Avondale, La.

With seven-and-a-half tons of steel recovered from New York City's World Trade Center forged into its bow stem and hundreds of New York City first responders in attendance for the ceremony, the ship's motto "Strength forged through sacrifice. Never Forget," was heard loud and clear.

An array of speakers were on hand for the christening, including the Honorable Gordon England, Deputy Secretary of Defense. England spoke about the naval tradition of christenings and the naming of ships.

"The names are important," he said. "They come from battles, or symbols, or communities, and they serve as reminders of the sacrifices of Americans past and present.

Each has a legacy, and as 'New York' will for the Sailors and Marines that will serve upon it, each is a source of inspiration."

On Sept. 7, 2002, while serving as Secretary of the Navy, England formally announced that LPD 21 would be named New York from the decks of USS Intrepid, a refurbished aircraft carrier, which serves as a museum ship, and is moored in New York Harbor.

While a small crew had already been assigned to New York's ship's company, the bulk of the crew is scheduled to report for duty in the fall. The ship is scheduled to be commissioned in September 2009 and will be homeported in Norfolk.

Ron Parker, a retired New York City firefighter, was one of many New York City first responders on hand for the ceremony.

Parker served with Brooklyn, N.Y. Ladder Company 148 Sept. 11, 2001, and remained at the World Trade Center wreckage site almost around-the-clock for more than four months after the attack while he helped recover the remains of 45 of his fellow fire fighters, along with countless others. In the shadows of the 25,000-ton vessel New York, Parker personally christened the ship with a perspective that may define the spirit of the amphibious transport dock's legacy.

"Embedded in the core of this mighty ship," he said, "are the souls of mighty heroes, never to be forgotten."

GTMO financial specialists promote saving

Story by MC1 Robert Lamb

NAVSTA Public Affairs

Some people believe that Social Security is going away. Some believe retirement checks won't be issued to retired Sailors they turn 62 years of age. No matter how often you think about money, at some point during your lifetime, you'll probably wish you saved more of it. Money!

"Military Saves" Week was observed throughout the Fleet and right here in Naval Station Guantanamo Bay (GTMO) from Feb. 24 to March 2.

The campaign is a week of intense focus on taking financial action and making a commitment to save money. In 2008, the Navy's "Military Saves" campaign focused specifically on saving for emergencies, reducing debt to improve personal financial readiness and promoting youth financial responsibility.

Three 'Command Financial Specialists' from NAVSTA Security tried to spread the word about "Military Saves" by conducting a volunteer training forum at the Windjammer on Thursday and Friday of last week.

MA2 James Isabella, MA1 Robert Mueller and MA1 Jeremy Manley are all qualified Security Department personnel authorized to give financial information to Sailors.

"This was initially for NAVSTA Security members only, but we decided to open it up to all hands on base," said Isabella. "All of us who facilitated a class want to thank PS1 Taybron Virgin from Costumer Support Desk (CSD), who volunteered his time on Thursday to teach the Military Pay Issues section."

Banking and financial services, Credit management, consumer awareness, Thrift Saving Plan (TSP) and developing a spending plan were just a few of the important topics that they covered each day.

"We were all taught by Fleet and Family Support Center (FFSC) Personal Financial Manager Paul Walker, who recently transferred from GTMO," Isabella said.

"Military Saves" Week is to persuade, motivate and encourage Department of

If you missed any of the lectures or training and you believe you need financial information you can call FFSC at 4675 or 4047 or get in touch with your Command Financial Specialist.

Defense employees to save money and reduce consumer debt. The campaign reached out to Service members, spouses, youth and civilian employees.

Talking about money during "Military Saves" Week is a good thing, but even better than that is talking about it throughout the year. Navy leaders should be encouraging Sailors to take action and make a commitment to save money all year long. Talking to Sailors who are preparing to leave the military, whether it's after 20 or 10 years, should motivate military members and their families to make a commitment to save. Participants in Military Saves Week included Command Financial Specialists, Fleet & Family Support Center, Public Affairs, installation banks and credit unions, Child & Youth Programs, Morale, Welfare, & Recreation, commissary, schools and more.

Financial experts always say, "save 10 percent of your paycheck and place it in an account you can't touch until you retire". Do you do that? Sailors throughout the year are encouraged to start a TSP account, where you don't pay federal income taxes on your contributions or earnings until you withdraw the money. Have you done that? "Save three to six months of expenses for emergencies." This was probably not done either.

Understanding budgeting, plus saving and investing, can be some of the best advice a Sailor can get in his or her Navy career.

If you missed any of the lectures or training and you believe you need financial information you can call FFSC at 4675 or 4047 or get in touch with your Command Financial Specialist.

"Those who attended the training all said they learned something new. Because it was a smaller group that participated, we were able to get more into particular situations. All in all we were pleased with the results and will likely, at least at the department level, continue to incorporate financial training for our Sailors," added Isabella.

IA Sailor shares experience with students

Imagine studying about Iraq and the current conflict, but rather than just read about it, you ask the sailor himself.

Students in Beverly Zwiebel's fifth grade class learned lessons from Iraq Feb. 29, that they can't learn in school books after connecting with a Naval Station Guantanamo Bay (GTMO) Sailor who has been temporarily assigned as an Individual Augmentee (IA) in Iraq supporting the Global War on Terror.

Navy Chief Fire Controlman Randy Jakobitz's daughter Ella asked her father to talk to her class at the W.T. Sampson Elementary School.

Jakobitz, a 22-year Navy veteran, volunteered for an individual augmentation deployment to Iraq in August 2007. He has spent the last few months on the ground with an Army unit, working on counter-improvised-explosive-device (IED) operations. He's stationed near the town of Tal Afar, Iraq as an electronic warfare officer.

"I've always wanted to do my part," said Jakobitz. "I wanted to have direct impact with the war effort and this was good way to do it," he added.

Jakobitz was authorized a few weeks R&R back in GTMO and quickly decided to take his daughter up on her offer to meet her class and talk to the students.

As a dozen or so students looked attentively at Jakobitz in his digital green camouflage uniform, normally seen on Army personnel in GTMO, others couldn't resist holding up their hands to ask their questions.

Jakobitz talked about the Iraqi lifestyle, politics, education, economy, geography and most importantly about his mission and the mission of all the armed services in Iraq.

He tried to explain to the children, using basic terminology, the need for greater electronic command and control to protect our ground forces from IED attacks. These counter-measures have saved many lives in the last year or so and Jakobitz stepped up to the plate and made a difference and most definitely saved lives himself.

"When units have problems with their systems, Counter 'Radio or Remote Controlled Improvised Explosive Devices Equipment' or (RCIED), they bring them to me," said Jakobitz. "We fix them, replace them and we install them. I'm responsible for about 112 systems. We're just trying to make sure that their [servicemembers] stuff is working when they roll out the gate."

According to a House Armed Services Committee, by the early fall of 2003, IED attacks had reached 100 a month. They have been responsible for approximately 40 percent of coalition deaths in Iraq since 2003.

When asked why he volunteered for IA duty, Jakobitz' response was "My name was on the list of eligible Sailors." "It's been the most rewarding tour that I ever had in the Navy." Any time you have soldiers coming back and saying 'Hey Thanks', your equipment worked. An (IED) blew up fifty meters away from our convoy and your stuff saved our (lives). It's all worth it."

CDC recognizes 'Iguanas' parent participation

Story by Terrill Wicks

MWR Villimar CDC

The MWR Child Development Center (CDC) would like to congratulate the preschool class 'Iguanas' parents and staff for their contributions to our program during the month of February.

Parent participation has always been an important part of the child development program curriculum.

At the beginning of 2008, Program Administrator Terrill Wicks expanded the parent participation program into a friendly competition.

Wicks implemented a program in which parents volunteer their time reading stories, helping with crafts, attending field trips, and various other activities.

Each time a parent participates in an activity, their child's teacher places a block representing that activity on the parent participation board located in the CDC's lobby.

The location of the board was selected so that families and children have a visual of what is happening in the classrooms and in the parent participation program.

"Parent involvement is very good [for everyone]. When parents come to the program, it helps the teachers and the children learn about their culture," said Pauline Thompson, Iguanas classroom teacher. "We really learn more about each other and it also helps us communicate better with each other."

Each family is asked to participate in the program.

"Children get to see their parents and this makes them very happy," said Amy Ghuneim,

Students and staff from the Child Development Center's 'Iguanas' classroom pose after a luncheon March 4 in honor of their success in the program's parent participation contest. The 'Iguanas' parents participated in more classroom and CDC activities than all other parents in the contest during the month of February. The 'Iguanas' received $500 to spend on supplies for their classroom.

'Iguanas' parent. "We also get to see who our children talk about [on a regular basis]. My son may say, 'My friend is Alex', and I get a chance to meet him," said Ghuneim. "In this community, I may be at the store and a child may say, 'Look, mommy that is Maher's mother', so it helps us to also communicate in the community outside the CDC."

The children of the CDC also view the parent participation as an extra opportunity for them to see their parents who traditionally work or have other tasks during the day and enjoy introducing their classmates to their family.

"My mommy reads stories in the class, it makes me feel good," said three-year-old Abigail McCord, Iguanas student.

The GTMO Child and Youth Programs would like to congratulate all of the families that participated and volunteered in our program with special congratulations to the Iguanas.

The Iguanas families participated in a luncheon at the CDC March 4 where each family received a certificate of participation for their success in the new program and a slice of Pizza!!!

The families also had the opportunity to help the teachers and children decide which special supplies to purchase for their classroom.

The CDC also congratulate the 'Iguanas' teachers, Pauline Thompson and Andrene Bailey-Johnson.

Story, photos provided by Taylor Edwards

W.T. Sampson Reading Specialist

The Dr. Seuss celebration was a big hit. Guest readers from various commands and community family members made this an outstanding SeussVille event.

Our guest readers included Cmdr. Sylvester Moore, Mrs. Buzby, Mrs. Einhorn. Chaplain Mowbray and a host of other parent, servicemember and community volunteers.

Katie Basel beat up some Green Eggs and Ham as part of the National Honor Students share in the reading fun. Ms. Taylor Edwards was sponsor of this annual event which lasted for one week.
