History Channel divers film at NEDU for new project

NAVAL EXPERIMENTAL DIVE UNIT PANAMA CITY, FL. – Hosts of the History Channel show “Deep Sea Detectives” came aboard NEDU June 5 to film for a new project called “Dive Portal.”

“Dive Portal” is a DVD magazine specially designed for the diving community, said Richie Kohler, executive producer for “Dive Portal,” and co-host of “Deep Sea Detectives.”

Because “Deep Sea Detectives” reaches a mostly non-diver audience, John Chatterton, also executive producer for “Dive Portal” and co-host of “Deep Sea Detectives,” said they wanted to do something specifically for the diving community.

“We’re hoping to show something to divers other than SEALs; we’re showing research, the new technology, testing (at NEDU),” Chatterton said.

Kohler described “Dive Portal” as a DVD video magazine for sport divers that has a variety of sections in-

Sailors warned of VA data compromise

Chief of Naval Personnel
Public Affairs

WASHINGTON (NNS) — The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) announced June 3 that active-duty Sailors may be affected by the theft in May of military personnel data.

According to the VA, a duplicate database with data files was stolen from a VA employee’s home May 3.

While the VA has received no reports that the stolen data has been used for fraudulent purposes, they are asking all veterans to be extra vigilant and to carefully monitor bank statements, credit card statements and any statements relating to recent financial transactions.

Several resources are available for people to go to for more information. The Department of Veterans Affairs has set up a special Web site (<http://www.firstgov.gov/>) and a toll-free telephone number (800-FED-INFO or 800-333-4636) that feature up-to-date news and information on the data compromise. The site offers tips on how to check credit reports, how to guard against identity theft and whom to call if an individual believes any fraudulent activity is occurring using his or her personal information.

The Navy and Department of Defense are working closely with the VA to determine how many Sailors and other service members may be affected by the compromise of records. Sailors whose information has been compromised will be notified by a let-

EBACS cards will streamline base access

Currently, there are many acceptable identification cards recognized to access the gate at Naval Support Activity Panama City in addition to the Common Access Card, or CAC.

The Navy is turning to the CAC as the primary identification system for base access as well as for logging on to computer terminals and various web-based systems.

Although this base has continued to honor a wide variety of government identification formats since the first CAC cards were issued, the NSA PC Security Department has been evaluating access control procedures to streamline their process, reducing the types of identification cards recognized for base access.

If you have a CAC card or a military ID, this will be-

Officer in Charge
Naval Support Activity
Panama City

come your means of entry to NSA PC. Most other badges, particularly command-specific IDs, will not be accepted after October 1.

If you are a permanent employee on base and not a CAC cardholder, you will be issued another form of identification, the Electronic Badging and Access Control System (EBACS) card.

These new cards are being issued to personnel aboard NSA PC with full implementation scheduled for October 1.

Security is currently working with your managers and supervisors to issue EBACS badges in compliance with the new requirements.

After this date, the only other authorized badges/identification cards for entry to NSA PC will be military ID Cards (active duty, dependant, retired and delayed entry); temporary badges issued by the Visitor's Reception Center; or specially issued cards or documentation such as an MWR gym pass, a VA Clinic appointment letter or a base retiree card.

As of October 1, if you do not have one of the above listed means of identification, security personnel stationed at the gate will direct you to the Visitor Reception Center.

After normal VRC hours, if you do not have one of the above listed means of identification, you will need to have a valid form of picture ID (a driver's license works best) to be sponsored aboard and escorted by one of your supervisors or a fellow employee.

If you have any questions or concerns, the security point of contact for this evolution is the Physical Security Officer, Ken Tillman. He can be reached via e-mail at kenneth.j.tillman@navy.mil or telephone at ext. 7193.

ter from the VA and the Navy so they can take the appropriate steps.

Tips on how to watch for suspicious activity include the following:

Closely monitor your bank and credit card statements for fraudulent transactions. Monitoring accounts online is the best way to detect fraud early.

Place a 90-day fraud alert on your credit report, which tells creditors to contact you before opening any new accounts or making any changes to your existing accounts. This action may cause some delays if you are trying to obtain new credit.

It is only necessary to contact one of three companies to place an alert. That company is then required to contact the other two.

The three companies are Equifax (800-525-6285, www.equifax.com), Experian (888-397-3742, www.experian.com) and TransUnion (800-680-7289, www.transunion.com).

Once the fraud alert has been posted, you are entitled to free copies of your credit reports. Review these reports for inquiries from companies you haven't contacted or accounts you didn't open. The alert can be renewed after 90 days.

Sailors are advised to take the following steps if they discover fraudulent accounts or transactions:

Contact the financial institution to close the fraudulent account(s) that have been tampered with.

File a report with the local police department.

File a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission by phone at 877-438-4338, online at www.consumer.gov/idtheft or mail a letter to Identity Theft Clearinghouse, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20580.

cluding: exotic dive locations, local dive destinations, extreme diving, and a special "Diving With..." portion.

"Which brings us here," said Kohler, "NEDU is being highlighted in the second issue of 'Dive Portal.'"

The intent is to provide their viewers with an inside look of NEDU, said Kohler. "One of the things that this job has given John and I is unbelievable access, and we are very fortunate and thankful.

Kohler continues, "But we want to share it... what's going on behind the closed doors of the NEDU, what is going on in diving physiology, with equipment testing, things that people are curious about."

Chatterton said he and Kohler hope to share their enthusiasm for diving. "We like to see what is new, what's being done, where diving is going."

"Divers are going to be fascinated with what goes on here," said Chatterton. "It is amazing to think of how new diving science is; the people here (at NEDU) are working hard to learn more."

Kohler explained that it was the NEDU that developed the Navy dive tables in 1912. "Without that you didn't know what was going to happen," he said.

According to ND1 (DV) JR Hott, leading petty officer of Unmanned Testing and Evaluation, the crew filmed in multiple locations throughout NEDU.

Hott said they went to the Ocean Simulation

Facility and shot video of divers doing a thermal decompression study and later went to the Experimental Dive Facility where they filmed the testing of a rebreather.

"We were doing oxygen control and they came in and sort of picked our brains on the rebreather's ability to control the level of oxygen in the breathing loop," Hott said.

The next day, Kohler and Chatterton were able to enter the test pool and film EOD Tech, ABHC (EOD) Michael Robinson demonstrating a familiarization dive going through emergency procedures with changing an MK 16 rebreather, Hott said.

Kohler has previously worked with the Navy and is impressed by their procedures.

"This is probably one of the safest environments we could dive in," said Kohler. "Navy diving is highly supported and arguably one of the most professional operations that I've ever seen in my life. They leave nothing to chance, at all."

The first issue of "Dive Portal" is scheduled for release this month while the second issue, with NEDU's appearance, is scheduled to be released in September or October.

Chatterton agreed and said, "The star of the segment really has to be NEDU. We're just the guys shining the spotlight."

DVDs are available on their website www.diveportaldvd.com as well as in dive shops, venues and newswires.

Changes speed up service at Auto Skills Center

Maureen McClain
Staff Photojournalist
NSA PC

The Auto Skills Center has been a fixture on NSA PC for a long time, but in the last few years the mission of the shop has changed under the direction of Manager Gary Smith.

Smith, who manages the Marina and Outdoor Recreation Center as well as the Auto Skills Center, took over the skills center after the base realigned under Navy Region Southeast and began making immediate changes.

“We made some decisions to change how things were run; we cleaned house and made things more customer-friendly,” Smith said. “I wanted customers to see a difference, an improvement, in how things looked and operated.”

Smith redirected the skills center’s mission to do solely preventative maintenance rather than large projects that were tying up bays. Both this change and an appointment system sped up the service time for customers he explained.

“We did an initial customer evaluation and found that one of the biggest complaints was customers not getting their cars back quicker,” Smith continued, “So we also set up the Early Bird Service enabling customers to drop off their cars before the shop opens.”

But the most important thing to Smith was the overall feeling customers got upon entering the Auto Skills Center.

“I wanted an environment that made customers feel welcome when they came to the door,” Smith said. “So I immediately moved Lynn (Tindell) up from the marina to work as the customer service clerk, and that has made a big difference.”

Along with Tindell’s reassignment, Smith made an entire crew change over the last six months. The staff is working together very well, he said.

“They’ve all bonded up there and that’s really important.” He continued, “When I ask two different employees the same question and they give me the same answer, I can tell they’re talking.”

Team Leader Richard Brannon came onboard at the end of 2005 and both he and Tindell saw an increase in customers throughout the spring.

“This year’s been really good to us; we’re way beyond expected goals,” Brannon said, explaining that because of the increase and customer requests for longer hours, the shop is doing a trial run extending closing time from 6 to 8 p.m. on weekdays for do-it-yourselfers.

The Auto Skills Center has seven bays, five of which have lifts. Bay rentals cost $3 for military personnel and $5 for civilians to rent for the day. According to Brannon, the skills center has high-quality, brand name tools and lifts.

“All the equipment is in good condition and we take precautions to guarantee quality work and a safe garage. We insure that everything is operating safely,” Brannon said.

The most common services the center performs, according to Tindell and Brannon, are oil changes and brake jobs, but the center offers a wide variety of other services.

Chaplain Ben Howard, who has been at NSA PC for 13 months, said he’s had wires, spark plugs and tires replaced; rotors and brakes changed; and engine checks done.

“The Auto Skills Center here at NSA is the best I have ever seen. They are always very fast and you cannot find a better price anywhere. Their associates are friendly and very helpful,” Howard said.

“At most bases that I have been to, it is at best a do-it-yourself garage that may offer an oil change service,” Howard said, comparing the Auto Skills Center to other hobby shops he’s used in the past.

Smith credits his staff for the successful operation that it has become. “They’re front line employees and I try to put the tools in their toolbox for them to be able to do the job they need to do,” Smith said.

A price list with all the services offered is available in the Auto Skills Center brochure.

The current hours of operation are Tuesday through Friday, 10:00 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Saturday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. It’s located behind the post office, across from the Bachelor Enlisted Quarters.

Early Bird customers must call in the day before and specify the service they want. Call 234-4300 for appointments.

Annual NSA PC oil response training a success

Maureen McClain
Staff Photojournalist
Public Affairs Office

The Port Operations crew completed a three-day Facility Response Team training course to learn oil spill response procedures May 25 at the Naval Support Activity Panama City pier and marina.

The annual training was facilitated by Bill Woodward, a retired CW04 Gunner who teaches oil spill response at military and commercial ports worldwide wherever oil is transferred.

According to Woodward, "A public law mandates the course. The first day is classroom focusing primarily on equipment, procedures and safety."

During this session, Woodward said he showed the trainees slides and used pictures he has taken all over the world to illustrate many of the concepts he teaches for spill response.

Practical training began the next day at the Port Operations pier. The crew's first step was enclosing the simulated oil spill with the containment boom which, according to Team Leader BMCS (SW) Robin Abrahams, Port Operations leading chief petty officer, is an "18-inch wide, weighted barrier that hangs down into the water to encircle the spill and contain the oil."

Booms are kept on the bow of Boom Platform Boats. When spills occur close to the shore, one end of the boom is affixed to an onshore point while the boat moves around the spill area surrounding the oil with the boom.

Woodward explained that in addition to containing spills, booms are also used to direct the oil away from sensitive areas, e.g., marsh, wetlands, and freshwater creeks. This concept was demonstrated on the shoreline near the NSA marina by simulating a sensitive area just up the coast from the "spill."

This training exercise involved the Boom Platform Boat and a personal water craft that ran boom across large areas of extremely shallow water and onto shore, according to Woodward.

On the beach, response team members affixed the boom to an anchor point. Then the platform boat slowly reversed through the water letting out boom to deflect the spill from the "sensitive area."

Abrahams explained that in an actual spill response, boats and other equipment called skimmers are often used at this point in the cleanup.

"The skimmer can be used independently or with up to two other boats with an oil boom to funnel the spill to the skimmer," he continued. "When it's full, the skimmer can then pump the oil to a holding tank on a larger vessel or ashore."

Port Operations' skimmer, Woodward remarked, looks brand new and is better condition than it was when it first arrived. He also said that all of the boats are well-kept and attributed that to, "excellent leadership, well-ingrained upkeep and maintenance practices together with small-boat handling skills."

Abrahams, who has been through the course

three times, felt positive about the training and Woodward stated in the course report that Abrahams did an excellent job.

"Since his arrival, there has been a remarkable improvement in the waterfront material and readiness conditions.

He has instilled a superior level of personal attention to detail in his charges and it shows."

When the course concluded at NSA PC, Woodward felt positive about the training.

"In my 30 years of active duty I have never seen a group of general duty sailors take their mission as serious as NSA Port Ops. I enjoy working with them and look forward to challenging them in the future," Woodward said.

How do I know you are the one? Let me count the ways:

1. Will you stimulate my mind, body, and spirit?
2. Will you make both of us happy?
3. Will you help create good memories?
4. Will our relationship progress from passion to companionship?
5. Will our sex-life be compatible?
6. Will you help provide needed security in life?
7. Will our relationship be intellectually challenging?
8. Will you be able to establish a strong family as a foundation for our relationship?

10. Will you be able to collaborate and compromise even on issues you feel strong about?
11. Will you be totally committed to this relationship?
12. Will you be able to change your thoughts, feelings, and behaviors for the benefit of this relationship?
13. Will you share "power" with me?
14. Will you be there to help me and not just to run my life?
15. Will you help me make decisions and not always just tell me what to do?
