

WOMEN LEARN SELF-DEFENSE TACTICS

Over two days, during four classes and with about 80 people in attendance, the women at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam sent out the message loud and clear: they are not to be messed with.

The CNIC Navy Security Forces Regional Training Academy performed a two-day clinic with a total of four self-defense classes for women July 7 and 8.

"Everyone thinks it [sexual assault] won't happen to them, but all it takes is just that one time," said Tracy Bennett, one of the class participants.

The conception of the class occurred at the Women's Health and Fitness Fair on March 11, when security forces gained feedback and interest in a self-defense class. It was at that time that Col. Robert Lee, training program director, and Capt. Brad Miller, senior training instructor, decided to offer a women's self-defense class.

"It's very important that women are exposed to something like this," said Lee. "This will reduce the numbers [of sexual assault and abuse] greatly if they have the skills to implement in those situations."

Class participants spent the first half of the course in a classroom setting, learning the statistics of sexual assault, and how women can prevent such things from happening to them. They also learned that many incidents happen within the home, and it is usually with someone they know.

"In those situations, your mind tends to freeze up, but we know what to do now so that we don't panic," said Heather Warden, another participant.

The second half of the course was in a padded, well-lit dojo. Participants partnered up and learned defensive moves, as well as moves to separate themselves from an attacker long enough to run away. They then practiced these and various other moves that could work in multiple situations on their partners.

The class had some laughs, but there was an underlying note of seriousness, especially when the instructors discussed the importance of what they were learning.

Miller stressed not worrying about your purse or possessions, because you can't put a price tag on your life.

"We're doing this so that you don't become a statistic," said Miller. "We're doing this so you can become a success story."

Class members seemed to take this to heart, with participants ranging from active duty Air Force and Navy to wives and family members, as well as Department of Defense employees.

"I'm preparing to deploy and have never been given any kind of defense training," said Tech Sgt. Sarah Peterson of Pacific

Air Force, Judge Advocate office. "I'm doing this to protect myself and partially to pass on to my daughters."

"As a woman, compromising situations are inevitable, and it's important to learn techniques to escape, especially when it's the people that you know doing it," Peterson said.

Instructors told the women that they gave them the tools and chances for success, but that they would have to practice them on their own. It was recommended that all women go out and do the research, find self-defense classes, and hone their skills.

When asked what he most hoped women took from these classes, Miller's response was simple: "Confidence. One word,

Security Squadron wins base softball championship

Master Sgt. Doug Burhans' single with two men on and one out drove home the winning run in the bottom of the seventh and final inning as the 647th Security Forces Squadron (647 SFS) Pound Town softball team defeated Navy Information Operations Command (NIOC) Hawaii, 2-1, to capture the first ever joint base intramural softball championship at Millican Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam on July 9.

The victory completed a perfect season for the 647 SFS, which entered the three-day postseason with an undefeated 15-0 record and the No. 1 seed from the Hickam Wednesday Division.

NIOC was nearly as dominant after finishing up its season in the Ashore Softball League with a 13-0 mark. The two teams were the only squads to go into the four-division playoffs with unblemished records.

In the title game's final frame, Master Sgt. Sam Nelson opened the inning with a single, but was forced out at second on a ground ball that was hit by Tech. Sgt. Devin Stuckey.

Airman Chris Hechavarria followed with a single to put runners on first and second, before the hit by Burhans drove in Stuckey and sent his fellow teammates into a celebratory fervor.

"I wanted the opportunity because I didn't have a very good game the first game at bat," said the squadron's first sergeant about the team's early-round playoff win over NIOC. "I came up to the plate and wanted a chance to win it. I walked up to Gary (Tech. Sgt. Lafon) and said, 'Gary, you put your bat down because it's over."

Previously, the 647's only score came in the bottom of the third inning when a sacrifice fly by Lafon drove in Hechavarria, who led off the frame with a single and moved to third base on a single by Burhans.

Lafon, who pitched the entire game for the 647, made the lead stand until the top of the sixth inning when NIOC put runners on second and third with nobody out on a walk to Cryptologic Technician (Maintenance) 2nd Class Bryan Butz and an error on a batted ball by Staff Sgt. Kevin Sunyak.

While Butz scored the team's only run on a sacrifice fly by civilian dependent Justin Shoemaker, Lafon was able to get out of trouble by inducing a grounder to first from Staff Sgt. Luis Torres for the final out.

Although Lafon allowed the first NIOC batter to reach base in four out of seven innings, the 647 hurler gave an overall masterful performance in tossing six shutout innings.

For the game, Lafon allowed only eight NIOC batters to reach base on four singles, three walks and an error.

"It's tough when you get deep in the count," said

Lafon about walking the tight wire in the close game. "It's a little frustrating, but you got to fight through it. With the defense we have behind us, I have all the confidence that they are going to make the plays. I'll pitch inside and outside, but I try and throw strikes and let my defense take over."

In order to reach the championship game of the double-elimination tournament, NIOC had to fight its way back from the loser's bracket and had just defeated the 535th Airlift Squadron (535 AS) Tigers, 11-3, prior to its matchup with the 647.

Still, NIOC outfielder

Cryptologic Technician (Collection) 1st Class Dustin Tieskoetter said that quick turnaround wasn't a factor in the team's struggles at the plate.

"When you play against somebody sound like these guys are on defense, you got to hit the ball and we just didn't do that," Tieskoetter said. "I think we just had to be a little more patient. A lot of us were swinging at the first pitch."

Immediately following the game, Burhans admitted that the win was extra special. He said that not only did he get to play with a great bunch of guys, but he may have also played his final softball intramural game at joint base.

"It's a very emotional time for me," he stated. "Twenty-three years playing intramural ball and this is my first base championship. These guys are a very special group of guys. I hope that a lot of them stick around and come back next year. I'll probably be retiring and moving on to another base."

Another key 647 player who won't be back is Tech. Sgt. Robert Wooderson, who didn't play in the postseason because of an injury, but served as the team's third base coach.

While Wooderson praised NIOC for its strong challenge, he said that winning the playoffs might have been sweeter if last year's Hickam champs Hawaii Air National Guard (HIANG) was able to participate.

The HIANG, which beat the 647 in last season's Hickam championship final and finished second in the Hickam Wednesday Division this year, couldn't play in the joint base tournament because the playoffs were held during its reserve duty weekend.

"I was disappointed, but we talked to the HIANG and they understood that work is work and mission comes first," Wooderson said. "We wanted revenge for the season before, when they beat us. It never really happened, but the good news is that they were in full support for us."

Now armed with one title in hand, Wooderson said that he has one more goal before he leaves the 647.

"Here's the deal: This is just a kickoff to taking over the island softball-wise," Wooderson announced. "Our goal is to combine the best on both sides and then take titles all up and down this island to represent Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam."

Short-handed 747 CS holds on to tie 647 CES

Down two players and out-kicked by a margin of 10-3 on shots on goal in the first half, the 747th Communication Squadron (747 CS) held on to forge a dramatic 0-0 deadlock with the 647th Civil Engineer Squadron (647 CES) in a Soccer Intramural League Gold Division matchup at Ward Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam on July 9.

The 747, which entered the game with an overall record of 2-8, started its meeting versus the 647 with seven players, which is two below a full squad, but just enough to avoid a forfeit.

Yet despite its shortcoming and squaring off against a tough 647 team, which held sixth place in the division with a record of 4-3-3, the 747, led by an outstanding effort from active-duty spouse goalkeeper Michael Gregg, stepped up to the challenge and avoided what seemed to be a sure defeat.

"We just tried to put as much effort as we could," said Gregg about the 747's gutsy performance. "We got guys that, luckily, are willing to put forth the effort and do their best."

Although the 647 also gave everything it had, the team, said 1st Lt. Allen Lewis, was hampered by its inability to come up with the big shot.

"It's kind of been a plague all season," Lewis said. "We have opportunities, but we can't seem to finish. We get the ball in front of the net and try to get it to the right guy or anybody else but ourselves."

Lewis added that once the teams got out on the field, it didn't matter that the 747 was short a couple of players.

Airman 1st Class Jordan Hanks of the 747th Communication Squadron (747 CS) blocks 647th Civil Engineer Squadron (647 CES) 1st Lt. Allen Lewis from reaching the ball during a Soccer Intramural League Gold Division matchup at Ward Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam on July 9. The two teams battled to a 0-0 tie.

"You put guys on defense, and they don't have any forwards, you're still playing the same amount of defenders," Lewis explained. "They played a good solid defense. They were very fast and we play only two forwards, so we don't have a lot of attacking power. Maybe changing our forwards might have been a little bit better."

While the 647 consistently got beyond midfield and near the box, getting the ball past Gregg was a totally different story.

Forced out of his midfielder position because of the team's lack of players, Gregg was pressed into expanding his area of coverage at the goal, but still managed to come up with enough big stops to keep the 647 off the scoreboard.

Following the game, an exhausted Gregg said that he couldn't have done it without the help of his fellow teammates.

"The defense did great for me - especially as an inexperienced goalkeeper," Gregg noted. "I was lucky that I had two great guys watching my back. They kept off what I needed and I was able to fill in the rest."

In competing without a full squad, Gregg said that he just tried to keep things simple in order to make it difficult for the 647 to score.

"My thought was I'm going to take the angle off as best as I could and luckily I did that," he stated. "A couple (shots) hit the post, but most of them went wide."

Lewis agreed that the play of Gregg was an important factor in keeping the 647 scoreless.

"He came out and was very aggressive," Lewis said. "He took away a lot of shots by taking away the angles from us."

Gregg said that while the game ended in a standstill, considering the circumstances, he'd take it as a moral victory.

"It really is," he admitted. "I feel like we put in double the effort because we're short, these guys are subbing every few minutes, and we're winded. To come off 0-0, we'll take it."

Pearl Harbor Futbol Club sneaks past SDVT-1

The Pearl Harbor Futbol Club (PHFC) got an early goal from Tech. Sgt. Martin Vicente and made it stand, as the team edged past SEAL Delivery Vehicle Team-One (SDVT-1), 1-0, at Ward Field, Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam on July 9.

The win hoisted PHFC back to the top of the gold division with a 10-0-2 record, while SDVT-1, last season's Navy intramural champions, remained in fifth place at 7-3-1.

Despite missing a couple of key players, PHFC managed to hold on to its slim lead by using a tough defense that was anchored by the strong play of Department of Defense (DoD) civilian goalkeeper Jordan Hutchison.

In the first half, SDVT-1 out-kicked PHFC by a margin of 12-1 on shots on goal, but came up empty each time, as Hutchison and his teammates stepped up to smother every shot.

Hutchison said that the team worked on a plan to push SDVT-1 to the perimeter and not allow anything down the middle.

"All of our guys have played before so we all know that," Hutchison pointed out. "We don't consciously talk about pushing them to the outside, but it's standard practice. My guys did a pretty good job of keeping them away."

John DeAlmeida, a striker for SDVT-1 and spouse to an active-duty Sailor, said that while he and his teammates tried their best to spread the field and maneuver in for a clear shot, the team got too anxious as it approached the goal.

"We were too busy trying to pressure the goal," DeAlmeida admitted. "We were too busy trying to rush it and not really focusing in on playing the ball out."

Meanwhile, although PHFC had only one shot on goal in the entire first half, the team made it count.

Only a few minutes into the game, DoD civilian Nate Hogue moved the ball past midfield and spotted Vicente streaking down the middle ahead of the pack.

Hogue booted a perfect pass in front of Vicente, who took the ball and beat SDVT-1 goalkeeper Marine Cpl. Victor Lugo to the goal for the game's lone score.

"Martin gave one shout out to me and I looked up and I saw him breaking to the middle," Hogue said. "The opportunity presented itself, I saw an opening and I was able to just get it right through. He was able to take that and finish."

Lugo came out of the box to try and stop Vicente, but said that he got there a little too late.

"Two of my defenders were coming in and I thought that they were going to crash, so I hesitated a bit," Lugo said. "By the time I got there, I got two fingers on it, but I couldn't stop it."

Although SDVT-1 slowed down a bit on offense in the second half, the team still managed to out-kick PHFC, 7-2, on shots on goal.

However, the outcome was the same, as the SEALs were shut down and shut out by the division leader's outstanding defense.

"They had four people in the back against (our) two forwards and four versus two isn't really going to work for us," DeAlmeida noted. "So we were forced to make shots from outside. It's just the nature of the game. I mean it's all about skill and everything like that, but even sometimes a lot of skill isn't going to help put the ball in the back of the net."

DeAlmeida had a golden opportunity to tie the score late in the game, but his kick on goal drifted wide to the right and ricocheted off the right post.

While Hogue said that it felt great to hold on and earn a tough win over the defending champs, he also acknowledged that it was too close for comfort.

"That's a 50-50 gamble," he said. "I definitely wasn't confident that we were going to sustain that lead the whole time, but you just got to play and keep your head up all the time and hope you do well."

DOD launches Military Spouse Employment Partnership

Elaine Sanchez

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON (NNS) – Top government and military officials unveiled the Military Spouse Employment Partnership program during a ceremony at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D.C. on June 29.

The partnership encompasses more than 70 employers who have committed to expanding career opportunities for military spouses worldwide, and to recognize the skills and talents they bring to the employment table.

In remarks at the event, Dr. Jill Biden, wife of Vice President Joe Biden, lauded military spouses for their service and sacrifice as they juggle households, children, volunteer work and jobs - many times in the midst of deployments.

Due to their ability to thrive despite multiple challenges and demands, she noted, military spouses possess the qualities highly sought after by employers, such as dedication, flexibility, a strong work ethic and "endless energy."

"If you're looking for hard-working, highly skilled and educated, dedicated employees, our military spouses are precisely the employees you need," Biden said. "Every day our military spouses are giving back to our country. While their loved ones are called to serve, they serve right alongside them. Now we must serve them as well as they serve us."

Deborah Mullen, who was accompanied to the event by her husband, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Navy Adm. Mike Mullen, acknowledged the difficulties military spouses face in finding jobs. Many spouses, she noted, are turned away for jobs, not due to their qualifications or training, but due to the frequent moves their service member spouse is required to make.

"More than one spouse has told me, 'All I wanted was to get in the door to be able to be judged on my merits, my qualifications and my strengths.'"

Mullen said in many cases they are unable to even score an interview.

"They aren't asking of rules to be broken or regulations to be cast aside," she said. "They know the economy is tough out there ... This isn't about entitlement for them; this is about opportunity. Military spouses just want the same shot as everyone else."

She said one percent of the nation serves, comprising about 2.2 million service members, and about half of them are married to someone seeking a job. Most of those job seekers are women, she noted, "educated resilient, serious women who possess strong values and even stronger work ethic."

The partnership signifies a positive step toward employing these highly skilled spouses, Biden said. "We're making it a little easier for them to find work, and perhaps a little less frightening for new employers to take that gamble and find the talent so resident in our ranks," she said.

But the work is just beginning, Biden noted. Today, the Defense Department launches the partnership, she said, and "tomorrow, we must make that partnership work."

Dr. Clifford L. Stanley, undersecretary of defense for personnel and readiness, lauded the partnership, noting that programs like this didn't exist when he joined the Marine Corps in the 1960s. He recalled a time when he and his wife had to watch their spending, unsure of whether or not she would have a job at the next duty station.

Today, there is an abundance of programs aimed at supporting military families, and their welfare is taken into consideration at every level of command, Stanley said. The partnership is a significant commitment toward that military family care and, he added, "a big deal" for spouses and employers.

The event also marked the inclusion of 15 new employers who signed onto the partnership. Leaders from each company stepped forward to sign a statement of support, signifying a pledge to:

- Increase employment opportunities for military spouses, while maintaining employment for relocating spouses.

- Provide career promotion opportunities for military spouses who are excelling at their jobs.

- Ensure pay equity for military spouses commensurate with their level of training, work experience, accomplishments and credentials.

- Spread the word about spousal support throughout the military and corporate America.

Partners also are pledging to post job opportunities on the Military Spouse Employment Partnership Web portal located on OurMilitary.mil at <http://www.ourmilitary.mil>.

The partnership program evolved from the Army Spouse Employment program, through which more than 100,000 military spouses have been hired since 2003, explained Robert L. Gordon III, deputy assistant secretary of defense for military community and family policy.

"As [this program] continues to grow, just think about what this partnership can do for our spouses, for our military," he said.

Retired Army Brig. Gen. Gary Profit, senior director of military recruiting for Walmart, one of the program's partners, noted the importance of caring for military families in all sectors of society.

"As a retired Army officer, and with a spouse that followed me around the world for 31 years, it's an opportunity to give back to those with whom we had the privilege of serving," he said of the partnership. "It's an important public and private partnership we have to honor the service and sacrifice of military spouses who have served very much as their uniformed member serves."

Military spouses also voiced their approval of the program.

"It will make our lives as military spouses so much easier, because right before you move there's that ramp up of getting that resume ready and all that on top of moving," said Kristi Hamrick, an Air Force spouse who has moved 11 times in 17 years. "If you can get a job where you have another job waiting on the other end ... that would reduce so much stress."

"I'm overwhelmed," said Jennifer Pilcher, wife of Navy Cmdr. Eddie Pilcher. "I truly think it's the first time in history that the military spouse has been recognized. To sit here and hear the program is for us is overwhelming and exciting."

NEX customers will receive five-cent credit for using eco-friendly reusable bag

Navy Exchange Command

Navy exchanges (NEXs) worldwide are continuing a program to help customers save money and to help the environment. Customers will receive a five-cent credit toward their purchase for each eco-friendly reusable bag that is carried into the NEX by the customer and used to bag that day's purchase.

"The Navy Exchange System is continually working to find ways to help save its customers money and to help the environment at all its locations worldwide," said Rear Adm. Steven J. Romano, commander, Navy Exchange Service Command (NEXCOM).

"We are hoping that this program will encourage patrons to reuse, recycle and save by promoting the use of reusable shopping bags. This program will also help reduce the amount of plastic disposable bags used at the NEX which will save money and help lower the amount of plastic bags being sent to landfills," Romano explained.

The five-cent credit program applies to all NEX retail and services facilities where bags are normally used. It does not apply to direct run concessions, such as food operators and mall kiosks that are operated in NEXs. The program does not apply to a disposable plastic bag that is being brought into the NEX to reuse.
