

Three NASK civilians retire

Three NAS Kingsville career civilian employees and residents of Kingsville closed out their federal services careers this week. All three were recognized for their sustained, superior performance to the Department of the Navy by NAS Kingsville Commanding Officer Capt. Chris Misner during a command quarters.

“This is a big deal,” Misner told the Sailors and civilians gathered at the Captain’s Club. “Our civilian work force plays a critical role in our mission accomplishment, and our civilian employees provide critical services and support to that mission. They are crucial to our success, and we should recognize their service – especially when they reach the point of retirement.”

Misner presents Connie Cashen, admin assistant for the Air Operations Department, a Certificate of Retirement. Below, right, Capt. Misner presents a command plaque to command Financial Manager Anna Carvajal. The total combined service of the three equals 100 years, with Carvajal logging 38 years of service, Cashen marking 34 years, and Reyna compiling 28 years.
