

NEW PARENT SUPPORT HOME VISITATION PROGRAM

The New Parent Support Home Visitation Program (NPSHVP) is a voluntary early intervention program for new parents. The key component is home visitation. It is designed to promote healthy family functioning, child development, and positive parent-child interactions.

Free Support

The NPSHVP is a free support service program designed to meet the needs of expectant active-duty military personnel, their spouses and families with children under the age of 4. The program was created to provide prenatal and parenting skills education to active-duty service members and their families.

Goal

The NPSHVP goal is to enhance quality of life by empowering parents to meet challenges of parenthood, while maintaining a military lifestyle. The program offers a variety of services, including prenatal health and nutrition consultation, breastfeeding education, early child development education, parenting skills and home visitation services.

NPSHVP Professional

The NPSHVP professionals know that raising a family is very rewarding and sometimes can be challenging. They are committed to helping active-duty parents and their children maintain a strong and healthy family.
