

120322-N-OX321-120 AYASE, Japan (March 22, 2012) - Board members from the Japan Women's Association present Capt. Steven Wieman, commanding officer of Naval Air Facility (NAF) Atsugi, with paper cranes as a thank you for the services rendered by Sailors during Operation Tomodachi one year ago. Operation Tomodachi was a humanitarian mission focused on aiding the people of Japan in the aftermath of the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami that struck Fukushima Prefecture. (U.S. Navy photo by Mass Communication Specialist Seaman Kegan E. Kay/Released)

120322-N-OX321-128 AYASE, Japan (March 22, 2012) - A board member from the Japan Women's Association present Cmdr. Christopher McCarthy, executive officer of Naval Air Facility (NAF) Atsugi, with paper cranes as a thank you for the services rendered by Sailors during Operation Tomodachi one year ago. Operation Tomodachi was a humanitarian mission focused on aiding the people of Japan in the aftermath of the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami that struck Fukushima Prefecture. (U.S. Navy photo by Mass Communication Specialist Seaman Kegan E. Kay/Released)

120322-N-OX321-201 AYASE, Japan (March 22, 2012) – Capt. Steven Wieman, commanding officer of Naval Air Facility (NAF) Atsugi, receives paper cranes as a thank you for the services rendered by Sailors during Operation Tomodachi from board members of the Japan Women's Association. Operation Tomodachi was a humanitarian mission focused on aiding the people of Japan in the aftermath of the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami that struck Fukushima Prefecture. (U.S. Navy photo by Mass Communication Specialist Seaman Kegan E. Kay/Released)