Valentine Mothers-Daughter Tea a big hit

By JO2(AW) Honey Nixon, Public Affairs Office

Dressed in their colorful sundresses and hats, mothers and daughters joined in an afternoon of friendship and tea at the Mother-Daughter Valentine Tea.

The tea, held Feb. 11, at CAPT and Mrs. Mark Leary's quarters overlooking the shores of Guantanamo Bay, gave members of the Officer Civilian Spouses Club (OCSC) and the Enlisted Civilian Spouses Club (ECSC) the opportunity to get together and discuss ideas for the next Spouses Seminar Activity Group's (SSAG) seminar.

More than 80 mothers and their daughters turned out for the tea, enjoying conversation, and an array of hors d'oeuvres, ranging from pumpkin cookies to chicken-salad sandwiches.

The table centerpieces, created by Suzanne Janolino and other local 'shellers,' were conch shells filled with flora and fauna gathered from the shores and gardens of Guantanamo Bay. Local photographer, Harriot Johnston, offered tea-goers the opportunity for mother-daughter portraits.

Sponsored by SSAG, ticket sales generated from the tea will go toward funding the annual seminar scheduled for later this summer, which treats service members' spouses to have a weekend of education, fun and relaxation.

SSAG also organized the Jamaican Memorial Weekend getaway. Marianne Airhart, vice president for the OCSC, said the Valentine tea was a huge success, raising $600 for SSAG. Janolino enjoyed helping create the atmosphere for the tea, and was thankful to be part of the festivities.

"It's important to bring everyone together and feel a sense of community," Janolino said. "It was really like being in 'Alice in Wonderland.' Where else can we sit down and enjoy tea in February, when they're having snow flurries in Virginia?"

CNO delivers shipbuilding plan to Congress

By Chief of Naval Operations Public Affairs

WASHINGTON (NNS) — Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Mike Mullen submitted his long-range shipbuilding plan to Congress Feb. 7, designed to grow the fleet to about 313 ships – up from 281 today.

“We need a fleet for the future which is balanced in many capabilities,” Mullen told reporters at the Pentagon. His plan will meet the requirements of the Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) and reverse the recent trend of shrinking the fleet.

“We’re at 281 ships today and it’s my view we need to turn that around with the embedded capabilities that we’ve looked at,” he said.

The Navy’s 30-year shipbuilding plan is required by law and accompanied the Navy’s FY’07 Budget submission to Congress. It supports the new emphasis on expeditionary and conventional warfighting missions expressed in the QDR. The QDR was submitted to Congress Feb. 3.

The plan is also designed to stabilize the Navy’s shipbuilding future for warfighting Sailors and industry partners. Building a fleet for the future is one of Mullen’s top three priorities, which also include sustaining current readiness and developing 21st Century leaders. Shipbuilding, he said, is one of the most daunting challenges the Navy faces today.

“Current readiness is in pretty good shape, the people accounts are in pretty good shape, and my biggest challenge is to build a fleet for the future in a very, very different world that covers a full range of missions,” Mullen said.

Endorsed by the Secretary of Defense and Secretary of the Navy, the plan supports the Navy’s continuing trend toward modernization and a larger force than the one currently deployed around the globe to win the global war on terrorism, respond to humanitarian crises, and deter future competitors in the maritime domain.

Highlights of the plan call for a fleet of 11 carriers starting this year, and populating the fleet with 15 Littoral Combat Ships and 113 Surface Combatants by FY’11. The first LCS is scheduled to be christened this fall and commission early in 2007.

“I have got to invest the resources, stabilize the plan, and in my expectations for industry, establish it,” Mullen said. “[We must] support a strategic partnership between the Hill, industry and ourselves.”

Mullen also responded to questions regarding the Navy’s increasing role in Iraq and new missions, including taking command of Joint Task Force Horn Of Africa (JTF-HOA), assuming responsibility for detainee operations at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the establishment of the Naval Expeditionary Combat Command with its related missions, increased demand for Special Operations Forces, and the creation of a Foreign Area Officer community.

“Basically you take skill sets that we have to assist, take the talent that we have to assist in what’s going on over there, and to look at it really from as joint a perspective as we can,” Mullen said about the Navy’s expanding roles and missions. “It’s very clear that the ground forces have been in a very tough rotation over the last several years, and if we can pitch in and help relieve some of that we’re going to.”

February is National Dental Health Month

Even in this day of unprecedented health awareness and nearly-universal fluoridated water, dental decay is the single most common chronic childhood disease in America (according to the Surgeon General’s Oral Health Report 2000). Some of the causes include when a parent should start caring for a child’s teeth and the frequent and long-term exposure of sugary liquids to a child’s teeth.

Long-term and regular consumption of sugary beverages such as regular soda and sweetened fruit juices in a bottle or cup puts teeth at risk for decay. Healthy baby (or primary) teeth are important because they hold the place for the permanent teeth and help guide them into correct position.

If left untreated, severely decayed teeth may cause pain, infection and premature tooth loss, resulting in difficulties in speech and chewing.

February is National Children’s Dental Health Month. It is a good time to review ways to decrease the risk of childhood tooth decay. Some tips for parents include:

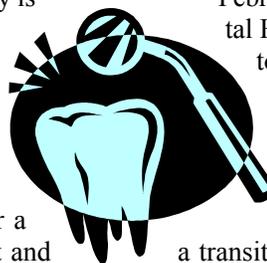

- Weaning a child from the bottle or breast by age one.

- Using spill-proof cups as a transition step in the development of children, not as a long-term solution.

- Not allowing children to use spill-proof cups throughout the day (slow sipping has more potential for harm compared to use at mealtime, when increased salivary activity helps clean teeth).

- Drinking sugary beverages through a straw.

- Introducing good oral health habits early.

Seniors auction memorabilia

By JO1 Igo Wordu, Public Affairs Office

A wide range of artifacts, clothing and cookware depicting history and craftsmanship from various parts of the world were on auctioned on Thursday, Feb. 9 at the Bayview Club.

The auction, organized by the W.T. Sampson High School seniors 'Students Taking a Trip' committee, was part of a fund-drive to help raise funds for a proposed class trip.

The auctioneer, Eric Nikkeo, said he was honored to have been asked to host the event, which was for a good cause.

"It was a privilege for me to be part of something that could impact these students in a positive way," said Nikkeo. "It is time well spent for me."

The students raised more than $1,200 as auction items were supplemented with t-shirts and wrist bands that the seniors have been selling for several weeks. Ted Leiky, a 12th-grader, said that he was happy to have contributed to the success of the auction.

President of the organizing committee, Sharon Davis, said GTMO residents and students donated the items that were put up for auction.

She was delighted it was such a success. She said the turnout exceeded her expectations.

"I am glad that people found the time to attend this auction," said Davis. "Frankly, I didn't expect as many people as we had tonight, and I certainly appreciate the money we were able to raise for the students."

Hollowmen take top honors at Valentine tourney

By JO1 Igo Wordu, Public Affairs Office

Rounds of paintballs were fired almost endlessly as rival teams slogged it out during the Valentine's Day Paintball tournament held Sunday, Feb. 12, at the paintball range.

Five teams took part in the event, but in the end, team 'Hollowmen' took home top honors. Hollowmen defeated the JTF team Merc 1 in the final contest.

"I am happy that my team won this competition," said Aaron Carvajao, a member of the victorious team. "Merc 1 is a tough team to beat, and we had to work harder this time to beat them, because they beat our team in our first match."

Merc 1 looked certain to win the competition as they had a relatively easily run to the final contest. Their precision and ability to take strategic positions enabled them to put away their opponents with relative ease in the early rounds. Merc 1 also had a one game advantage over the Hollowmen after defeating them in their first match-up.

Leading up to the final, the Hollowmen faced stiff competition from team Ginnhens, who finished third. Only a lucky shot from Nick Basel put Hollowmen through to the final contest.

MA3 Justin Sosa said he had fun at the event despite his team's second place finish.

During trophy presentation, Glenn Smith, the MWR event coordinator, thanked the participants for their show of sportsmanship. Participants shook hands and congratulated each other after the final contest.

Free Turbo Tax proves popular

By Donna Miles, American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON – A partnership that enables military members and their families to file their tax returns electronically without charge is proving tremendously popular, with 103,000 returns already filed as of Feb. 7, a Military One Source official told the American Forces Press Service.

“That’s a big response!” the official said. More than 97,000 people filed their returns electronically within the first 20 days after being offered free access to Turbo Tax software, she noted. Military OneSource and Intuit, a financial services company, are partnering to offer the Turbo Tax basic product for both federal and state returns at no cost.

In addition to active-duty members and their families, National Guard and Reserve members and their family members also have access to the program, regardless of their activation status. Deployed DoD civilians and their families also qualify.

Users can access the software through the Military OneSource Web site. A simple, secure, step-by-step system allows them to save, print and send completed tax forms electronically to the Internal Revenue Service, officials said.

While the Defense Department has a long history of offering tax help to military members, this is the first time DoD has offered the opportunity for them to self-file electronically.

Another free service enables military members and families to make toll-free calls to tax experts from any deployment location in the world, Jan Burke, deputy undersecretary of defense for military community and family policy, said in announcing the program in January. The toll-free number is (800) 342-9647. More phone numbers for people living overseas, non-English speakers and people with disabilities are posted on the Military OneSource Web site.

That service could come in particularly handy this year, due to deployments and other circumstances that affect taxable income, Army Lt. Col. Janet Fenton, executive director of the Armed Forces Tax Council, noted recently.

For example, Iraq, Afghanistan, Bosnia and Kosovo all qualify as combat zones where military income is tax exempt. In addition, a recent change in the tax code provides provisions for victims of hurricanes Katrina, Rita and Wilma.

DoD proposes Tricare hikes for younger military retirees

By Gerry J. Gilmore, American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON – The Defense Department is proposing that working-age military retirees and their families pay higher premiums to help address rising health care costs that have doubled over the past few years, senior DoD officials said here today.

The proposed changes would apply only to eligible military retirees under age 65 and their families, officials said. There would be no change for active duty military or their families, or military retirees age 65 or older and their families.

When the Tricare health care program for active duty and retired military members and their families was established in 1995, retirees then were contributing about 27 percent of the cost of their benefit, Dr. William Winkenwerder Jr., the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs, said during an interview with Pentagon Channel and American Forces Press Service reporters at the Pentagon.

However, military health care costs doubled from $19 billion in 2001 to just over $37 billion in the 2006 defense budget, Winkenwerder said. And today’s average military retiree contribution for health care coverage has dropped to about 10 to 12 percent, he said.

“Their contribution did not change, while the value of the benefit continued to rise,” Winkenwerder said. If approved by Congress and signed off by the president, the proposed Tricare rate hikes for retirees under age 65 would be phased in over fiscal 2007 and 2008. That should bring up younger retirees' share of Tricare costs closer to the 1995 level, he said.

DoD proposes Tricare hikes for younger retirees ...

By comparison, Winkenwerder said, civilians under private plans generally pay between 35 and 40 percent of their health care costs.

The current Tricare Prime annual enrollment fee for retirees is $230 for individuals and $460 for families for both enlisted and commissioned military retirees, according to DoD documents.

The proposed changes would increase Tricare Prime enrollment fees for junior enlisted retirees at pay grades E-6 and below to $325 per individual and $650 for families by October 2008.

Enlisted retirees at pay grades E-7 and above would pay $475 for individuals and $950 for families by October 2008 under the proposed changes. And retired officers of all ranks would pay $700 per individual and $1,400 per family.

Finding ways to manage increased military health care costs "is something we just have to face up to, because it's an enormous amount of money," said Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld.

The alternative to not raising rates, Winkenwerder said, would be to degrade a first-class benefit for retired military members and their families.

"You can see our benefit is a much better benefit, and we want to keep it that way," Winkenwerder said.
