Clean-up commemorates Earth Day

By JO1 Igo Wordu, Naval Station Public Affairs

As many as 649 33-gallon bags of trash and four dumpsters full of wood and metal were collected around the installation during a basewide clean-up held Friday, April 21 in commemoration of Earth Day 2006.

Military commands, departments and civilian employees participated in the effort.

Every department was designated a specific area on base for the clean-up, which commenced at 2 p.m.

The First Class Petty Officers Association volunteered to clean-up Tarawa Road, and began one hour before the scheduled starting time. They collected a total of four bags of trash along that road.

Environmental Director Fred Burns, said although the number of bags collected may seem significant, GTMO residents are adhering to trash disposal rules.

"We found very low amounts of hazardous materials in the trash collected," said Burns.

"In fact, for the first time in a long time, there were no disposed batteries collected during this clean-up."

On a lighter note, Burns said some of the materials found have been there for a very long time.

"For instance, there were bottles found which were dated 1963," he said.

Obviously, clean-up exercises like these help maintain a cleaner environment, but Earth Day is celebrated around the world for many reasons.

Earth Day began in 1970 as celebration and appreciation of the planet through a variety of individual and community activities.

It is more than observing the beauty and vitality of nature. Earth Day is also about renewing individual commitments to saving a living planet.

Commissions resume at GTMO

By Sgt. Sara Wood, USA, American Forces Press Service

U.S. military commission proceedings have resumed this week in the cases of three enemy combatants held at Guantanamo Bay since 2002.

Proceedings resumed in the case of Sufyian Barhoumi, an Algerian man accused of being an explosives trainer for Al Qaeda. Proceedings also begin for Jabran Said Bin Al Qahtani, a Saudi man accused of constructing circuit boards to be used as timing devices in bombs, and Ghassan Abdullah Al Sharbi, a Saudi man accused of providing English translation for a terrorist training camp and receiving training on how to build and use hand-held remote detonation devices for explosives.

According to the charges against them, Barhoumi, Qahtani and Sharbi were captured together in March 2002 at a safe house in Pakistan.

Barhoumi first appeared before the commission March 2. That hearing was cut short by the presiding officer because Barhoumi had just learned of the death of his father and was requesting permission to call his family in Algeria.

The phone call request was put in March 4, and has been approved by the Office of Military Commissions, Army Capt. Wade Faulkner, Barhoumi's detailed defense counsel, said in an interview recently. Now arrangements must be made with the State Department to get Barhoumi's family to the U.S. embassy so the call can be monitored, Faulkner said.

In his first hearing, Barhoumi requested a civilian defense counsel — Lee Foreman, a Denver-based attorney specializing in criminal defense and civil litigation. Foreman was supposed to attend this week's hearings, but his security clearance has not been approved, Faulkner said. The absence of Foreman may cause a delay in proceedings if Barhoumi doesn't wish to go forward without him, Faulkner added.

Another issue may arise due to Barhoumi's confinement status, Faulkner said. Barhoumi was moved March 30 from Camp 4, the medium-security facility, to Camp 5, the newest maximum-security facility here, he said. Barhoumi has communicated that if he is not moved back to Camp 4, he will be uncooperative in proceedings, Faulkner said.

According to the charges against him, Barhoumi attended an electronics and explosive course in 1998 at an al Qaeda-affiliated terrorist camp in Afghanistan. After completing his training, Barhoumi became an explosives trainer for al Qaeda, training members on electronically controlled explosives at remote locations, according to the charges.

Qahtani, an electrical engineering graduate of King Saud University in Saudi Arabia, allegedly left Saudi Arabia shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks with the intent to fight against U.S. forces in Afghanistan.

According to documents summing up the charges against him, Qahtani attended a terrorist training camp in Kabul, Afghanistan, and then moved to a guest house in Pakistan, where he received further training in how to build hand-held remote-detonation devices for explosives.

Qahtani is also alleged to have built circuit boards for use as timing devices in bombs and to have written two instructional manuals on how to assemble these circuit boards.

Sharbi, an electrical engineering graduate of Embry Riddle University in Prescott, Ariz., is alleged to have attended terrorist training camps in Afghanistan and to have provided translation for another camp attendee's military training.

According to the charges against him, Sharbi traveled to the guest house in Pakistan after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, where he received training in how to build hand-held, remote detonation devices for explosives.

Air Force Col. Morris Davis, the chief prosecutor for the Office of Military Commissions, said that he expects there will be issues in these three cases about the detainees objecting to their detailed defense counsel.

However, Davis said that all the detainees will be provided a full and fair trial.

Vamphear Circus wows Guantanamo Bay

By JO2(AW) Honey Nixon, Naval Station Public Affairs

It has been 20 years since a circus performed at Guantanamo Bay, but on Sunday, April 23, the Downtown Lyceum was once again the place of daring stunts and fun fair.

The Vamphear Circus performed to packed audiences during the two-day circus show with acts ranging from fire-eating, knife-tossing and an aerial artist.

With just seven performers, the group of entertainers drew children of all ages up close to the stage to watch them perform.

The children enjoyed the experience of getting up close and personal with the performers.

Oftentimes, they were invited to assist the performers on stage throughout the show.

"The guy in the balloon is my favorite," said Benjamin Frisbee, a W.T. Sampson Elementary School second-grader.

"I liked watching his head come out of the ball," he giggled.

Many of the performers have been in the circus business for a long time making appearances on late night shows including Jay Leno, David Letterman and Conan O'Brian.

Parents were glad their children got to experience the event.

"I think it's terrific," said Dennis Frisbee. "My kids loved it. I'm really glad they (the circus) came to GTMO."

The ringmaster of the show, 'Count Smokula,' also played an accordion and treated local residents to his rendition of 'The Guantanamo Bay theme song' leaving nothing but laughter in his wake.

Open Line remote debut – Radio FM 103.1 'The Blitz' tries something new as NAVSTA CMDCM (AW/SW) Larry Cairo and JO1 Chris Conklin talk on 'Open Line' Tuesday, April 25, at the Gold Hill Galley. This was the first time the informative radio show was recorded outside the studio. BCU(SCW) David Tyson was the special guest at the show. Tyson used the opportunity to talk about the upcoming 'Bail and Jail' which was held this week. 'Jail and Bail' was part of the command's effort to raise funds and participation for this year's Navy/Marine Corps Relief Society fund-drive. So far, GTMO has raised more than $6,000 through the Radiothon and individual contributions. Open Line will now be held once a month at various locations around the station.

Which team will be the next Knowledge Bowl champs?

By JO1 Bob Lamb, Naval Station Public Affairs

Contestants are needed to compete in Knowledge Bowl 2006 on Friday, May 19, at the Windjammer Club.

People of various ages, educational backgrounds, and military and civilian paygrades will put their heads together in a quest to become the 'Supreme Keepers of Arcane Knowledge.'

Teams consisting of four players each will go head-to-head and compete in the single-elimination tournament. The teams will be randomly chosen to see which team can answer the most questions out of nine proposed to each team.

One question from a previous competition was: What is not considered a pie - Boston Crème, Key Lime or Grasshopper?

Questions cover a number of subjects including sports and history.

One of the strategies of contestants in the past has been to mix four people of different backgrounds, with the end result being their knowledge of different categories would lead them to victory.

Teams need to register at the MWR Community Library not later than May 18.

For more information please contact Maxine Becker at 4700.

MK2 Juan Ramirez works out at least six times a week preparing for the All Navy Baseball Team summer schedule.

Opportunity knocks for Guardsman

By JO1 Bob Lamb, Naval Station Public Affairs

Participating in sports has always played a major role for servicemembers stationed in Guantanamo Bay. But most players know from day one of practice that the glory and accolades they receive on the field are not a glimpse into a future career in sports.

But they never know whose watching as they slide into second base, kick the winning goal, or even score the winning basket.

MK2 Juan Ramirez, stationed here with Coast Guard Air Station Miami's Aviation Detachment, might just be that diamond in the rough.

He's been playing baseball since he was a youngster and has dreaming of being a major leaguer since high school.

Born in Puerto Rico and raised in Cleveland, Ohio, Ramirez received an athletic scholarship out of high school to the University of Kentucky. Due to personal reasons, he declined the offer to UK and accepted another full scholarship to Cleveland State University in Ohio.

"I was a 'Mommas boy' and didn't want to leave home," said Ramirez. "So, I stayed in Cleveland. I played baseball at Cleveland State for a year, but because of financial hardships at home, I decided to leave college and join the Coast Guard."

His first duty station landed him back in his homeland of Puerto Rico, where he played class 'A' and double 'A' baseball.

"It was a good league, but I got transferred after a year and a half," he said.

The dream of one day playing for the Cleveland Indians slowly faded away as soon he and his wife, Rosa, started a family. Ramirez continued to play baseball any chance he could, and when he got stationed here, the opportunity to play was even better than he thought.

Morale, Welfare, and Recreation came up with a baseball league for adults last fall, and Ramirez led his team to a first place championship. MWR followed that first successful season with another league this past winter where again Ramirez's team won the championship.

The second season not only brought him another trophy, but also caught the eye of one of his competitors, Navy MA1 Juan Rivera. Rivera, who has been affiliated with the All Navy Baseball team since 2002 as a player and coach, noticed Ramirez's athletic talent and placed a phone call to the manager of the All Navy Baseball Team.

"If it wasn't for the MWR baseball league, this guy wouldn't have seen me play, and this would have never happened," said Ramirez. "I would have never tried out for that team."

That's all it took, a simple phone call with an outstanding recommendation and Ramirez became part of the team this year.

"His potential is limitless," said Rivera.

"He's a great athlete, very soft spoken, but he's the kind of Sailor that we want representing the All Navy Baseball Team."

With permission granted by his command, Ramirez received an acceptance letter from the U.S. Navy Baseball Club, based in San Diego, under the direction of Commander, Navy Region Southwest.

Navy Region Southwest looks for talent year-round with formal tryouts held at military installations throughout the year in preparation for an intensive eight-week 50-game schedule.

The All Navy Baseball Team is in its 17th season, and more than 16,500 active duty and reserve personnel have participated in the Navy Baseball Program in a worldwide effort to assemble the very best talent in the military.

Early this summer Ramirez will travel to San Diego, along with approximately 25 other sailors selected as the best the Navy has to offer in this year's 'All Navy Baseball Team.'

"I'm the only 'Coastie' that I know of on the team, but that's alright," Ramirez said. "I just need to get back in shape, and I'll be ready to compete."

"The (All Navy) team has practiced for the last couple of months, so when I get there, the games will have already begun. I'm definitely ready, I'll be fine."

There are only four people in Ramirez's

NMCB-7 near project completion

By JO2(AW) Honey Nixon, Naval Station Public Affairs

Thanks to a group of Seabees from Naval Mobile Construction Battalion Seven (NMCB-7), there will be a new refueling pier on Leeward in June.

The battalion will complete an on-going project which will provide fuel service to Navy and Coast Guard vessels coming to Guantanamo Bay.

Before, ships had to go to different stations at GTMO to satisfy their fuel needs, but this new pier will be a one-stop shop for boats needing aviation and diesel fuel, and potable water.

Project supervisor, BU2 (SCW) Bruce Smith Jr., said the bridge construction cost $229,000. NMCB-7 involvement in this project saved the Navy $500,000.

"No one in this group has ever built a pier," said Smith. "So, it's a brand new experience. Because we are working over water, it has been a new challenge everyday, but the biggest challenge has been learning as we go."

Even with all the cross-training and new experiences, the refueling pier's completion is not far off.

"The progress is going

BUCN Joshua Dibenedetto, with NMCB-7, knocks the rust off a piece of scrap metal to use for a template for the new refueling pier.

smooth, so we may actually complete this project by the middle of May even though the projected time to finish is June," said Smith.

Seeing a project to completion is not a luxury Seabee detachments often get because many of their projects are handed down from the detachment before them and are long-term in nature.

The Pier Quebec project, along with a new motor pool lot in Camp America, is a project the NMCB-7 battalion will see to its finish. Other projects, like the Guantanamo River bridge, and never-ending projects such as perimeter roads and rock quarry operations will be passed on to the next Seabee detachment.

"This project is great because you get to see it completed and used by people, like some of the projects I worked on in Iraq," said BUCN Joshua Dibenedetto. "We took it over from the last battalion, and it's come a long way. We also all are coming together to learn, so this has been a great in-rate project for all of us."

Month of the Military Child

Gen. Pace recognizes military children

Message from the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

I want to take this opportunity to recognize the extraordinary contributions of our nation's military families, who have faced many challenges - from family separations to frequent moves - with great courage.

I would especially like to acknowledge a special source of inspiration: children of military families.

You are patient and understanding when duty calls and your mom or dad cannot attend a soccer game, music recital, birthday party, or other important family or school activity. You are heroes in a quiet, thoughtful way, and I am grateful for the unconditional love you give your mom and dad.

Gen. Peter Pace,
Chairman, JCS

Many of you have experienced the sad and sometimes frightening experience of having your Mom or Dad far from home, serving around the globe in places like Iraq and Afghanistan.

Through your personal courage and support, you serve this nation, too - and I am proud of you!

Frequent moves are a way of life for the military child. It is never easy to say good-bye to friends and familiar routines, to begin again in a new school, a new neighborhood - and sometimes a new country! But your resilience and self-confidence are strengths that others admire, including your parents.

Growing up in a military family offers some challenges, but it also provides some special rewards.

You can be proud of your Mom and Dad for their brave defense of this great country. Your love and support sustains them.

So thank you for being there for Mom and Dad.

You are American patriots and role models for us all.

Guidelines for obtaining no-fee government passport

By PSC(SW/AW) Frank M. Ramirez, CPOIC CSD

All passport forms can be obtained by going to the listed links within this article:

— Complete Form DS-11 (Application for Passport). Do not sign the DS-11 until in the presence of a Passport Agent. Obtain form online at: <http://www.travel.state.gov>.

There will be given an option to print it or fill it out online.

If possible, fill it out online and then print it with the bar code. This form needs to be completed for each passport application.

— Submit proof of citizenship (such as an original birth certificate with a seal from the state issued, a tourist passport or an expired passport.) It is recommend that people retain their tourist passports in case there is a delay in the issuance of the official passports.

Anyone needing to obtain a certified copy of a birth certificate, should look up the website for the state where they were born and look for the link to vital statistics. Another website is www.vitalchek.com.

— Submit two passport photos, size 2 in. by 2 in.

— Submit identifying documentation (military ID card, driver's license or another acceptable form of identification).

— All personnel requiring no-fee passports should email PSC Ramirez at ramirezfm@usnbgmto.navy.mil with the following information: name (applicant)/ sponsor's name / rate/ sponsor's SSN / POB / DOB / rotation date, phone number / full name of parent command.

For more information about obtaining a passport or anyone needing help with the application process can contact PSC Ramirez at 4147.

Mental health screenings now available to military families online

By Gerry J. Gilmore, American Forces Press Service

According to a U.S. military psychologist military members and families coping with the stress of overseas deployments and other potential health-threatening issues, can log onto the Internet to get help.

Service members from all components and their families can obtain a mental health self-assessment or screening through a Web site co-sponsored by DoD and Screening for Mental Health Inc., a non-profit organization, said Air Force Col. Joyce Adkins, a psychologist with the Force Health Protection and Readiness Directorate at the Defense Department's Health Affairs office.

The [online] screening actually gets you to where you need to be in terms of counseling," Adkins said. "Once you do one of the screening checklists, it will give you the benefits that are available to you."

The Web site, brought online in January, augments other DoD mental health assistance resources, Adkins said. People logged onto the site are asked to answer a series of questions.

The program "grades" the completed survey, Adkins said, and gives people an evaluation of their present mental health and provides assistance resources, if deemed necessary. Other DoD-endorsed health sites tell customers how to access mental health counseling services but do not provide an online mental health screening program, Adkins said.

National Guard and reserve members returning from overseas deployments also are authorized to use the Web site, Adkins said.

Returning reserve component members have two years of health benefits provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs. "And it's totally free to them," the colonel pointed out. Such services are especially important today, Adkins said, because of the potential stressful effects deployments can have on both military and family members.

"It's a concern that people don't understand what their thoughts and feelings mean as they come back from deployment," Adkins said.

"As they re-integrate with their families, there may be conflict in the family that's not easily resolved.

"The mental health screening web site and other related programs available to service members and their families provide "a level of benefits and a level of service to help them understand what services are available to them for mental health issues," Adkins said.

Vamphear Circus comes to town

The circus entertainers brought not only their singing abilities but their fire-eating talents with them to the Downtown Lyceum on Sunday and Monday nights.

The Vamphear Circus performers entertain the audience with a number of different tricks and slight-of-hand. Balloon-sculpturing into little animals, flowers and swords was just one of the tricks. One lucky lady walked away with this pretty flower.

Circus performers often have the challenge of balancing their 'talents' while keeping audience members on the edge of their seats. This entertainer has the coordination and the agility to perform two tasks at once. Not only can he hula-hoop and stand on stilts, but Philip 'The King' Soloman assured audience participation throughout the night.

This dancing boy may have a future in the circus.

Singing and dancing was part of the entertainment.
