Winter break is coming up and though there's no school, learning doesn't have to stop. Neither does it have to be boring, said Jessica Carbon, a librarian at U.S. Naval Base Guam Library.

The library continues to offer a variety of services, including Wednesday story hour for children, book exchanges, Internet access, and video and audio books.

Carbon encouraged parents to visit the library with their children while school is on break.

"Parents with young children can visit during our Wednesday story hours to listen to our celebrity readers read a book," she said. "We have a sitting area where parents can sit back with their children and read a book together for fun and to connect with each other."

Carbon also noted that teenagers are welcome to visit the library to make use of their reference materials, magazines, and computers with Internet connection.

"I know that teachers sometimes give students research papers and other projects to work on during vacations, and the library is an ideal place to work on their projects," she said.
